Slain Girl's Fiance to Tell Of Asking Police for Aid

Four Reporters To Give Secret Testimony Today Before Committee

By Robert De Vore.
Post Staff Writer

The man who was to have married Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, and newspaper reporters who for years have observed the Metropolitan Police Department from the inside are to be witnesses today before the House Police Investigating Subcommittee.

Stanley Le Blanc, Farm Credit Administration employe, who frantically called police after his fiancee vanished in a thunderstorm June 15, will be called to the stand and asked why he believes the department reacted to his anxiety by delaying a search for the young woman.

Le Blanc last night reiterated his contention that when he reported Miss Strieff's disappearance to Private Edwin Grayson at police headquarters he was told there would be a six-hour wait before a search was instituted. Grayson, Le Blanc maintained, said he "couldn't" take the responsibility for starting a search."

But before he starts his testimony, four reporters who cover police headquarters for Washington newspapers will be asked to tell the subcommittee in an "off-the-record" session what they believe to be wrong with the department.

Darnall Admits Wait

A frankly dumbfounded subcommittee yesterday heard Lieut. George Darnall, chief of the homicide squad with 24 years of police experience, admit that he waited seven hours before visiting the scene of the Strieff murder and that he directed the slaying investigation while spending at least one-third of his time at his desk at headquarters.

But before Darnall came to the stand, the subcommittee decided to summon Le Blanc. It wants to settle the discrepancy between what Le Blanc told his Congressman, Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, and yesterday's testimony of Private Edwin Grayson, of the police public relations squad.

Grayson categorically denied Le Blanc's assertion to Hebert that the policeman told him there would be a six-hour wait before investigators began active search for his fiancee. Hebert closely quizzed Grayson, the first policeman informed of the disappearance of the War Department clerk, but the officer stuck to his denial.

Got First Call at 9:30 A. M.

Grayson declared that he was notified by Le Blanc of Miss Strieff's disappearance at 7:40 p. m. June 15, that he checked the casualty list, all city hospitals, the Women's Bureau and talked several times with Le Blanc and the girl's roommate before sending a scout car to the Strieff apartment to investigate "within an hour."

Darnall told the subcommittee he received his first call on the finding of the body in a garage at 1717 Q Street Northwest at 9:30 a. m., that about a half hour later he had reason to believe the body was that of the Strieff girl and that he visited the crime scene "about 5 o'clock that evening."

Case "Badly Handled"

Asked by Hebert why he waited so long before visiting the garage and why, as homicide chief, he did not take charge at the crime scene, Darnall replied:

"There were men up there."

"But you're the chief," Hebert said.

"That's O. K.," Darnall replied, then gave the explanation that the homicide squad has many other things to do beside investigate a single case, that, for example, there

Kilday Threatens To Probe Punishment Of 35th Division Unit

The Thirty-fifth Division's "Yoo-hoo" battalion of 350 footsore soldiers was warmly praised in the House yesterday and "grouchy, golfing old generals" were called to account.

Representative Kilday (Democrat), of Texas, wired Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, commander of the Second Army, that he may ask Congressional investigation of Lear's "severe punishment" of the soldiers for whistling at shorts-clad girls on a Memphis golf course.

Tousled-haired Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, took the floor of the House to ask why public funds should be spent by "grouchy" generals to "develop a lot of sourpuss soldiers."

"For my part," said Dirksen, "I will take the other kind of soldier. They can take that kind of discipline, but I think it is poor form."

Lear had ordered the provisional battalion of the 110th Quartermaster Regiment to make a 150-mile disciplinary march, 15 of it by foot, for calling to the girls and twitting the mufti-clad general in the midst of a golf stance.

Kilday wired Lear to explain his "mass punishment" of the soldiers,

Costs $225.05 Second Year

Budget Baby's Upkeep Is Less Than Initial Cost, Parents Say

Sharon Is Vegetarian By Choice and Winner Of Blue Ribbon

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 9.—Sharon Derer's parents totaled the expense account today for her second year and proved again that a baby is not a luxury.

The "budget baby's" expense sheet also indicated that it's the initial cost rather than the upkeep that counts.

Joseph Derer and his wife, Louise, began listing the expenses the day Sharon was born, July 6, 1939. Every penny spent was recorded in a little black memorandum book.

The figures showed that Baby Sharon cost $270.17 the first year (including doctor and hospital bills) and only $225.05 the second. But blonde, blue-eyed Sharon still rates as a million dollar baby in the Derer household.

Derer is 33, his wife 27. They have been married three years and live in a four-room flat that rents for $28 a month. Papa Derer did seasonal work as an icer of refrigerator cars when Sharon was born, earning $1,600 a year, but lately he has been training to become a machinist.

Although some of their friends put off having children for financial reasons, the Derers chose to have

2 Defense Housing Sites Picked; $2,000,000 Colored Project Set

Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody yesterday approved sites for two defense housing projects here which will provide 600 homes for families of civilian workers at the Navy Yard.

At the same time, completion of plans for a $2,000,000 housing project in Northeast Washington for 504 colored families was announced by Federal Housing Administrator Abner H. Ferguson.

Three-hundred fifty dwellings for the Navy Yard workers will be located in Anacostia, at Condon Terrace and Atlantic Street, with the Alley Dwelling Authority assigned to handle the project.

The second site, also in Anacostia, at Good Hope and Naylor roads, will contain 250 dwellings, consisting of a group house which will be built around a recreation center and a number of multiple-unit homes built around a court. The U. S. Housing Authority will supervise the construction.

Located on the site of the old Benning race track on Barnes Lane near Kenilworth Avenue, the project for colored families will consist of 17 two-story and three-story terraced fireproof buildings.

Apartments will be of three, four and one-half and five rooms. There will be 2,085 rooms.

A mortgage of $2,190,000 is being insured by the FHA to finance construction of the project by Paul T. Stone, developer and builder. Albert I. Cassell is architect.

Visit to Playgrounds Reveals Need for Penny Milk Now

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

It is taken for granted by Agriculture Department and public school officials that if Washington gets a penny milk program it will start in September when classes are resumed.

That is still more than two months away.

Go to any of 80-odd school playgrounds in the Capital today, about noon, and watch the hungry little boys and girls clustered around the fortunate ones who are drinking free milk and eating free lunches, children begging for a cracker or a sip of milk.

Two months is a long time for these youngsters to wait. A penny milk program, subsidized with Federal funds, would enable the District to serve the free half-pints to more than twice as many needy children as will receive them today.

A summer penny program was approved for New York City this week. Chicago's already is under way. The same goes for Phoenix, Ariz. A similar project is being

British Close In on Beirut As City Ignores Ultimatum

BULLETIN

New York (Thursday), July 10 (U.P.)—A British broadcasting corporation report heard by NBC early today indicated that Gen. Henri Dentz, French commander at Beirut, had ignored the British ultimatum to surrender the city, which expired at 5:30 a. m. Beirut time.

B. B. C. said British forces now are closing in on the Lebanese capital.

By the United Press

Cairo, July 9.—British imperial forces closed in on the Lebanese capital of Beirut tonight, ready to storm the city unless it capitulates to a British ultimatum expiring at 5:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, British commander in Syria, issued the ultimatum by radio from Jerusalem, addressing it to Gen. Henri Dentz, French high commissioner and commander in the Levant.

The ultimatum was delivered as the French and British governments entered into negotiations for an armistice to spare further bloodshed and destruction in the French-British hostilities which began a month ago.

(Australian tanks were reported driving into the outskirts of Beirut after crossing the Damour River and the main French defense line 8 miles south of Beirut.)

Dentz Asks For Truce

Vichy, July 9 (AP).—France asked Britain today for an end to the melancholy, month-old Syrian war, in order to halt "grievous bloodshed in a combat that grows every day more unequal."

The French high commissioner of Syria, Gen. Henri Dentz, submitted the request for an armistice through Cornelius Van H. Engert, United States Consul General at Beirut, a communique announced.

In London, Prime Minister Churchill announced receipt of the request in the British House of Commons but said that pending conclusion of an armistice "military operations must, of course, continue without abatement." He disclosed that from 1,000 to 1,500 British and Empire troops had been killed or wounded in the campaign.

French sources in London predicted that Syria and Lebanon would be placed under Free French occupational rule, with Gen. Georges Catroux as temporary governor. Catroux is commander of Free French forces in the Middle East and formerly was governor of French Indo-China.

Germans Claim Gains in Arctic, Report Anarchy Rife in Ukraine

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 9.—With Reichsfuehrer Hitler's headquarters confining itself to a statement that "the fights continue successful on the entire Eastern Front," German sources indicated tonight that the German forces in the north were pressing toward Leningrad and Murmansk.

German occupation of the strongly-fortified town of Salla near the Finnish-Russian Arctic frontier was announced by a military spokesman, and the news agency D. N. B. reported that Viljandi and Parnu in Estonia also had been occupied, along with Ostrov on the Latvian-Russian border.

Salla was taken in the drive from Finland against Murmansk, an important railhead and ice-free Arctic port. The three Baltic towns fell in the northeastward push the Germans are making toward Leningrad.

Report Pursuit of Foe

The Germans contended that they were in hot pursuit of Russians after taking the Baltic towns. At Ostrov, the Russians were said to have attempted to establish a new defense line.

D. N. B. announced tonight that the Russian rear lines suffered heavy blows throughout today, and that the German air force concentrated on the retreating enemy in the Baltic area "with great success."

In the Arctic drive, the authoritative information service Dienst aus Deutschland reported, German troops broke through the Titowka Heights fortifications, "bringing them in possession of a strategically important road to Murmansk."

Salla which became Russian in the 1940 peace with Finland, lies only about 10 miles within the new Russian border. It is about 75 miles from the Murmansk-Leningrad Railway, important communication line to the Arctic.

What was happening in the central sector, in the push toward Moscow by way of Smolensk from Minsk, was undisclosed here, but there were numerous reports of bitter fighting at unspecified points along the Stalin Line.

Hint Collapse in Russia

From the far south there were no military reports, but unofficial sources hinted that there were indications of an internal collapse on the Russian side. A Russian tank counterattack in this sector was acknowledged, but the Soviet formations were crushed and destroyed, according to informed sources.

From the German viewpoint the only place where the Nazi troops are encountering difficulty is in the land of the midnight sun. Dienst aus Duetschland said that because of the swamps and cliffs of Lapland, German infantry was obliged to break through the Titowka Heights

Secretary Knox said yesterday, in effect, that American warships patrolling the Atlantic are under orders to shoot if necessary to insure the safety of the sea lanes between the United States and all strategic outposts.

The Navy head disclosed at a press conference that new orders have been issued to the Atlantic Fleet by President Roosevelt which "go further" than the prior instructions to "observe and report" on any Nazi war vessels in waters under American patrol.

Asked if the Navy has been "ordered to shoot," Knox replied:

"Read the President's message."

"That doesn't cover it," the reporter objected.

"Oh, yes it does," returned the Secretary and then proceeded to read the following passage from Mr. Roosevelt's message to Congress Monday on the occupation of Iceland, a copy of which he had before him:

"It is, therefore, imperative that the approaches between the Americas and those strategic outposts, the safety of which this country regards as essential to its national security and which it must therefore defend, shall remain open and free from all hostile activity or threat thereof.

"As Commander in Chief I have consequently issued orders to the Navy that all necessary steps be

OPM Moves To Forestall Labor Dearth

Program Aims at Supplying 1,400,000 Additional Workers

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

To prevent a defense labor stoppage potentially many-fold more crippling than all past strikes combined, the OPM labor division yesterday acted on a Presidential request to assume "full responsibility" for supplying a minimum of 1,400,000 additional trained workers to armament plants within the next 12 months.

The enormous task is to be accomplished by expanded and intensified training programs, by directing defense contracts to labor-plentiful areas, and, if necessary, by instituting labor priorities under which workers in consumers goods factories would be transferred to defense operations, OPM Associate Director Sidney Hillman announced.

The job will be done through a newly organized labor supply branch in OPM and 12 regional labor supply committees, whose setup was described by Hillman at a press conference as "unquestionably one of the most significant poolings of labor, management and Government resources that has thus far taken place in the national defense program."

In other moves during the day Hillman:

1. Conferred with the heads of eight major aircraft companies, representing the industry on a regional basis, on the establishment of regional labor stabilization agreements, setting standard wage and working conditions by agreements patterned after existing stabilization contracts in the shipbuilding industry;

2. Announced the establishment of defense labor advisory committees, corresponding to the new defense industry advisory committees of the OPM, to meet with OPM

British Arms Effort Chaotic, Commons Told

Many U. S. Planes Declared Idle Due To Mismanagement

By William R. Downs
United Press Staff Correspondent.

London, July 9.—Charges of inefficiency and mismanagement in Britain's war industries, with "chaos from top to bottom" in airplane production and hundreds of vitally-needed American planes lying unpacked in warehouses, precipitated a fiery debate in the House of Commons today.

The slowness of airplane and tank production and the handling of labor were seized upon to launch the most lashing criticism of the government's home front policies heard in Parliament since the start of the war.

George M. Garro-Jones, Laborite, charged that a few weeks ago hundreds of American-made planes were lying unpacked in warehouses because "those who placed the orders . . . did not order the necessary auxiliary equipment."

[The Washington Post on June 28 reported exclusively that "several hundred American-built warplanes, safely shipped to England some time ago through the submarine-infested Atlantic, have been lying in British warehouses still uncrated because of a shortage of skilled technicians to assemble them."—Editor's note.]

Lieut. Rupert A. Brabner, Conservative, wearing the uniform of the fleet air arm with which he served in Crete, said that "in Greece, Crete, Lybia and Syria there has been an almost chronic lack of the most important materials of war."

"Our tanks in Greece, Libya and Syria have done marvelously, but they have not done so well against the Germans because there were not enough of them and they were too slow," he said.

Losses Are Heavy

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), July 10. Big German tank and mechanized forces are smashing anew at the Russian lines in three main areas, the Red Army announced today, and the Russian defenders are holding off offensive drives directed at Leningrad, Moscow and the Ukraine.

At several points the Russians were engaged in counterattacks, the Soviet information bureau communique said.

Here is the situation as pictured by the communique:

In the Ostrov sector the Russians are "engaged in stubborn battles pounding back the advance of superior enemy forces" near the Latvian border. The Germans here are trying to drive northeastward in the direction of Leningrad.

Fierce Battle in Ukraine

In the Polotsk sector, 150 miles south of Ostrov and in the general path of an eastward drive toward Moscow, the Germans renewed their offensive Wednesday morning and ran into Russian "deadly artillery and machine-gun fire" and "decisive counterattacks." The Germans were reported suffering heavy losses in fighting which continued on into today at a fierce tempo.

In the Novograd Volynski sector, near Zhitomir and the Stalin Line, and in the path of a German smash eastward toward Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, fierce fighting continued throughout Wednesday with large German motorized and mechanized forces taking part.

The Russians announced also that they carried out successful counterattacks in the Lepel sector at the head of the Berezina River, also on the way to Moscow for the Germans.

"In the other sectors," said the communique, "our troops are fighting stubbornly and maintaining their positions."

Science Makes Tin More Valuable Than Silver

The defense program has finally accomplished the alchemists' goal of making tin more valuable than silver.

This was disclosed yesterday in a report to the OPM from a committee of the National Academy of Sciences, which urged the substitution of silver for tin in solder.

To effect an "all-out" substitution about 65,000,000 ounces of silver would be required annually, it was estimated.

Fear that this program would result in a situation where bits of soldered rain pipe or repaired electrical gadgets would be filched for the content of the coin metal was set to rest by a finding that the silver solder would cost no more than present tin-lead binding material.

Forty to fifty pounds of tin, the report said, can be replaced by 2½ to 3 pounds of silver and "at present prices for tin and for industrial silver the raw material cost of 2½ per cent silver solder is practically identical with that of solder composed of 45 per cent tin and 55 per cent lead."

Second Draft Lottery Is Set For July 17

A second Selective Service lottery to determine the order of call for 21-year-old men registering July 1 will be held in Departmental Auditorium here next Thursday, July 17, at 7 p. m.

Secretary of War Stimson has been invited to draw the first capsule. The lottery is expected to take about two hours, with 750 numbers to be drawn.

At the same time selection headquarters revealed deferments have been ordered for men volunteering to fight with British or Canadian forces. (Details On Page 7.)

Roosevelt to Ask Billions More For Lend-Lease Aid and Arms

President Roosevelt will ask Congress this week for billions of dollars more—perhaps as much as another $7,000,000,000—to rearm the Nation and continue lend-lease help to Great Britain, the White House announced yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt will send Congress requests for supplemental funds for the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission and also will ask a second lease-lend appropriation to supplement the original $7,000,000,000 appropriated to start the aid-Britain program.

Informed officials said that the lease-lend request might double the original sum, while the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission estimates would also be "immense."

The funds for the Maritime Commission would be designed to increase the existing shipbuilding program as well as to speed it up, it was said.

A new lease-lend fund is needed, officials said, because the present one would be all allocated by the end of August. It would be necessary to have funds on tap so that long-range planning and letting of contracts can continue uninterrupted

Nazis Can't Win, Commissar Asserts

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 9.—Germany has failed in an effort to crush Soviet defenses, even though she sent 10,000 tanks against the Russian lines in an ultra-secret opening attack, Vice Commissar for Foreign Affairs S. A. Losovsky declared tonight.

Losovsky acknowledged that the German attack had caught the Russians unawares, and that the Nazis had succeeded in quickly wrecking several hundred planes.

Analyzing the military situation to date, this Soviet official declared that the German lightning attack was carried out so secretly that the German troops themselves were told where they were going only one hour before the assault.

Losovsky quoted German reports to the newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung to show that the "road to Russia is not yet open."

Blitzing the Blitzers

The report he cited said the Red army was reacting to the blitzkrieg differently from other armies previously attacked. The Russians, he said, counter-attacked and surrounded the German salients instead of fleeing from the battlefield.

"The German soldier clashed for the first time with a soldier who was trying to counteract with methods similar to those of the Germans," the vice commissar said.

Drawing a comparison between France and Russia, Losovsky said that France was not beaten, but rather was betrayed by its government and high command.

"We," he said, "have no rupture between the government and command and the army and the people."

"It will be a long, complicated and difficult struggle," said Losovsky, "but already it is clear now that Germany cannot emerge the victor because it is not enough to have military experience with great tanks and bombers. To win one must have men who know what the fighting is for."

Conditions Are Different

Referring to the German army's strategy, Losovsky said that it had traditional plans tested by the first World War and modified by capable use of a new technique.

The mistake of the German military, he said, is that it has standardized ideas which they attempt to use everywhere against all enemies.

"It is one thing in France but another here," he said, "where the front extends over 3,000 kilometers" (1,875 miles).

mans back along the central front before Moscow and said that they had annihilated two Nazi motorized regiments, but they acknowledged that the Germans had opened a second powerful smash toward Leningrad.

This thrust to the northeast toward the Soviet Union's second city —moving roughly parallel with another operating farther to the north in the vicinity of Ostrov—reached the area of Sebezh, near the Latvian frontier, some 80 miles northeast of Dvinsk.

German tank and motorized columns struck there in strong force, the Soviet command announced.

At the Red center, the defenders were declared holding the upper hand all along the line.

Near Lepel, aside from the destruction of two German regiments, four heavy artillery batteries and many antitank guns, the Soviet forces reported they had routed the invaders, who left hundreds dead on the field.

A significant declaration that documents found on captured German officers proved that Nazi artillery batteries had been transferred from the western front in occupied France, was made in the Soviet day communique.

Replaced by Wooden Guns

These papers, it was added, showed that artillerymen and equipment had been sent both from Cherbourg and Dunkerque and that in some instances sham wooden guns were set up in place of those removed.

(This Soviet announcement appeared to be a suggestion to the British that Hitler's continental defenses had been dangerously weakened and that a British offensive across the English Channel might be feasible.

(In London the ministry of economic warfare announced during the day that the British had arranged to supply large quantities of war materials to Russia, and that some military equipment already was on the way.

(Britain still held Russia to be an associate, however, and not a formal ally.)

During night raids and in combat over the fighting lines, it was added, the Nazis lost 62 planes to 7 lost by the Russians. As for Tuesday, the destruction of 102 German planes against 10 Russian losses was claimed.

Canadians Scared A la Orson Welles By Radio Bombing

Montreal, July 9 (AP).—Radio listeners in Quebec Province had a scare tonight in the belief that the aerial warfare of Europe was drawing close to their homes—all because of a broadcast skit describing a supposed bombing raid on Halifax.

Those who misunderstood the fiction for the real thing reacted somewhat like the citizens of the United States who were panicked in October, 1938, by Orson Welles' famous broadcast of the invasion from Mars.

It was only an "army night" program designed to entertain rather than to frighten. Nevertheless several listeners to the skit, entitled "If It Happened Here," were reported to have fainted when announcers broke in with fictional bulletins relating raids on Halifax, the sinking of Nazi troop transports in the St. Lawrence River, and the landing of Nazi soldiers in Quebec.

Just Goes to Show What Praise Will Do

R. A. F. Bombs Huge Gasoline Plant in Reich

By the Associated Press

London, July 9.—British bombers, striking deeper into Germany as north European summer nights lengthen, made a blazing raid on the Reich's great Ersatz gasoline plant at Leuna, the air ministry reported today.

Bombs were said to have fallen in many parts of the Leuna plant, which produces nearly 500,000 tons of synthetic gasoline yearly for Germany's Luftwaffe and panzer columns. It is near Leipzig and about 550 miles from London, the most distant target raided since the R. A. F. began its non-stop attacks on the continent June 16.

Daylight raiders followed up the night attacks with new thrusts over the Channel, including one on the power plant near Bethune, France.

Seven British bombers were reported lost in the night attacks and eight fighters during daylight Channel skirmishes, but the British claimed to have shot down five German planes during the night and 13 today. (D. N. B. official German news agency, said 17 British planes were shot down during R. A. F. raids across the Channel today.)

Striking back in larger numbers than in recent attacks, German planes bombed the Midlands, East Anglia, southwest England and northeast Scotland. The damage, however, was reported to have been slight.

In their own punishing night raids the R. A. F. hammered again at targets on which they have dropped tons of bombs in repeated attacks. The railway yard at Hamm was said to have been subjected to a "very heavy" raid that started large fires.

The fourth successive night raid on Muenster was reported to have started a huge fire. At Bielefeld bombs burst on buildings adjoining the railway station and many fires were started, returning pilots said. One pilot reported that a stick of bombs caused collapse of a row of industrial buildings at Essen.

in their drive toward Murmansk without the support of heavy artillery.

A thick fog was said to have cut visibility and restricted the operations of the Stuka dive-bombers.

"In bitter fighting at close quarters," said Dienst, "in which enemy machine gun nests had to be subdued, the German infantry broke through this strongly built Soviet defense line and got control of a strategically important road to Murmansk."

Report Anarchy in Kiev

At the southern extremity of the transcontinental front German, Rumanian and Hungarian troops apparently were pressing toward Odessa and Kiev in the Ukraine. A report attributed to the Kiev radio said that newspapers were not issued today in many Ukrainian towns and this, "together with statements by Bessarabian prisoners," said Dienst, "indicated that conditions in Kiev are approaching anarchy."

The high command's information service gave glimpses of bitter fighting. Two hundred yards from one town where German troops were resting, German antitank guns did battle with three Russian tanks, it was stated. The tanks ran over and crushed one antitank position.

According to the German story, a young lieutenant at another antitank gun shot and set afire all three tanks at a distance of 30 yards. "In and around the tanks," it was stated, "there were about 50 Soviet infantrymen. Those who were not burned up were knocked down by shells. Those who reached a nearby grainfield were cut off from flight by German shots."

D. N. B. said that even antiaircraft guns were brought into play against the Russian tanks, crediting one antiaircraft unit with destroying six Russian tanks. This unit, attached to a German tank division, also was credited with dispersing a Soviet marching column three miles long.

Airport Seized

Still another tank unit, according to D. N. B., conquered a Russian airport and seized 52 Russian planes. Of the fighter planes which succeeded in getting into the air, the Germans claimed two more, shot down by tanks.

The German air force, still carrying the attack deep into enemy territory, reported the destruction of six trains on the Zhitomir-Kiev line, where the trackage was blasted in several places. Between Polotsk and Nevel, D. N. B. added, there were 15 burning troop and freight trains.

RAF Fires Targets In Greece, Crete

Cairo, July 9 (AP).—The R. A. F. has sent its bombers over Greece and Crete, now in German hands, and started fires in a series of raids, the R. A. F. Middle East command announced today.

It said the attack on Greece was aimed at Eleusis, on the southern coast, about 11 miles northwest of Athens, and was carried out without any losses. The communique mentioned only "targets" on Crete without saying where they were.

Donovan to Head U. S. Intelligence

President Roosevelt will announce today, it was understood last night, appointment of Col. William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan to a newly created post as coordinator of intelligence information gathered by Government agencies.

Donovan will be given a staff that will cull and digest reports reaching Washington.

Axis Justified In Seizing U. S. Lands, Gayda Says

Rome, July 9 (INS).—The Axis is justified in seizing United States territories in the Western Hemisphere now that America has occupied Iceland, Virginio Gayda wrote in the Giornale D'Italia today.

"This occupation of Iceland," Gayda wrote, "creates a military precedent.

"Occupation of one continent by another on the pretext of self-defense justifies immediate retaliation in the form of eventual occupation by the Axis of peripheral American territories . . .

"Roosevelt's action constitutes a new, but not surprising, gesture of wax provocation. The American plan now is to seize Dakar and the Azores to encircle Europe offensively."

Zensser Assumes Post in Shanghai

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, July 9.—New arrival here is Christian Zensser, one of Adolf Hitler's trusted agents who has been active in Argentina, Guatemala and the Panama Canal Zone organizing alleged large-scale Nazi spy rings and other organizations.

Zensser was said to have been forced to leave South America on the insistence of United States counter-espionage authorities. He is now assuming the post of German consul general here, with possibility of appointment as ambassador to the pro-Japanese Wang Ching-wei government at Nanking.

Finns Drive Into Russia

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, July 9.—The Finnish high command announced tonight its troops supported by the Germans have driven more than 35 miles into Soviet territory, and the main goal was Kandalaksha, a vital point on the Murmansk-Leningrad Railway.

The main 200-mile-long offensive in central Finland stretched from Repolo on the banks of the Russian Lake Leksha northward to Salla. The Finns claimed the capture of both points well inside the Soviet frontier, but the latter still is 80 miles short of Kandalaksha.

Here in the capital rescuers still were searching for victims of a heavy Soviet air attack in which, preliminary reports said, 17 persons were killed and 156 wounded, 70 of them seriously.

The raiders attacked shortly after 4:30 a. m. and before many civilians reached air shelters.

The German commander, Col. Gen. Nikolaus von Falkenhorst, who conducted the German campaign in Norway and Denmark, wired the Finnish commander-in-chief, Field Marshal Baron Gustaf Mannerheim, that the Finnish flag was flying from the summit of Salla Mountain.

This is in the area along the projected Russian Kandalaksha-Kemijaervi Railway dictated into the armistice early in 1940 whereby Russia hoped to gain a rail outlet to the northern end of the Gulf of Bothnia.

Willkie Favors U. S. Bases in Britain

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Wendell L. Willkie emerged from President Roosevelt's office yesterday and told reporters that he advocated establishment of American military bases in Northern Ireland and Scotland.

Willkie, a luncheon guest at the White House, emphasized that he was expressing his own views rather than those of his erstwhile opponent at the polls.

His bold suggestion, however, followed American occupation of Iceland and also dovetailed with plans recently discussed in official circles for sending American soldiers to Canada to relieve Empire troops there for other duty and—in the event of a British invasion of the continent—using American troops to defend England while Britain's home garrisons are moved to the continent for a drive on Berlin.

The 1940 Republican Presidential nominee, declaring that "there is no use just giving lip service to Great Britain," stated that the Iceland occupation "is, in my judgment, but the first of similar steps that should be taken."

He disclosed that President Roosevelt had taken him into his confidence, discussing with him "in great detail" the international situation, including the move into Iceland and the Russo-German war.

After leaving the White House, Willkie told an informal press conference that British shipping losses were running far ahead of new construction.

For this reason, he said it is vital "to keep the sea lanes open."

"We can do one of two things," he continued. "We either can give Great Britain effective aid or we can render her only lip service.

"It would be better not to try to give any aid at all than to follow the latter course."

Willkie, wearing a battered Panama hat and a blue business suit that was badly in need of pressing, entered the White House by a basement door. Apparently a cabdriver had dropped him at the wrong entrance.

It was Willkie's first visit with the President since February 11, when the two political rivals held a long nighttime conference after Willkie, just back from London, had testified at a Congressional hearing in favor of the lease-lend bill.

Stressing the importance of safeguarding strategic approaches in the Atlantic, Willkie said that the matter of "particular places to be occupied" was a technical question "upon which I do not pretend to be an expert."

"For instance, if it be necessary to occupy bases in northern Ireland or even northern Scotland, I would be in favor of that."

Willkie's advocacy of bases in Ulster recalled the frequent Anglo-American advances made to the government of Eire to obtain bases for Britain there. Irish Premier Eamon de Valera has rebuffed all such overtures.

Willkie declared emphatically that he has no intention of accepting a Federal job. Answering reports that he might be "drafted" into the defense set-up, he said:

"I certainly do not want to. There was no discussion of any kind on that subject at our meeting."

Willkie arrived in Washington on a morning plane and saw Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, his running-mate last year. He returned to New York by a late evening plane.

British to Recall Halifax From U. S., London Paper Says

London (Thursday), July 10 (U.P.)—The diplomatic correspondent of the News Chronicle predicted today that Lord Halifax will be replaced as British Ambassador to the United States on his return to London, which is expected soon. He will resume his duties as a member of the war cabinet, the correspondent said.

The writer said many prominent Americans felt the Ambassador was hampered by his appeasement attitude at the time of Munich and the Spanish civil war, and predicted he would be replaced by someone not an orthodox member of the Conservative Party.

Embassy Is Vague

Asked for comment on the London News Chronicle's report, the official spokesman of the British Embassy in Washington said:

"This is merely speculative comment by a British newspaper whose political views are independent and often not in accord with the establish policies of His Majesty's government.

"We have, of course, no confirmation of the suggestion in the message."

Churchill Expects U. S. Navy To Cooperate With Britain's

By the Associated Press

London, July 9.—Winston Churchill predicted today that the British and United States naval forces may find it mutually advantageous to assist each other in guarding the supply lanes between Britain, Iceland and America.

Before a House of Commons which sent up the loudest cheers since the prime minister announced the destruction of the German battleship Bismarck, Churchill also announced that British troops would stay in Iceland and said it was most likely they would cooperate effectively with United States forces of occupation in resisting any German attack.

Warmly, he welcomed the American occupation of the strategic island as "one of the most important things that has happened since the war began."

He said:

"We still propose to retain our army in Iceland and, as British and United States forces will both have the same object in view, namely, the defense of Iceland, it seems very likely that they will cooperate effectively in resistance to any attempt by Hitler to gain a footing. It would, obviously, be foolish for the United States to have one plan for defending Iceland and for British forces to have another."

The Prime Minister observed drily that Britain was hardly concerned about what Germany thought of the United States occupation. He also said it was not for him to comment on President Roosevelt's views that the occupation of Iceland was necessary to prevent it from becoming a Hitlerian jumping-off place for the Western Hemisphere, but he added:

"I may say that they (the views) seem fairly obvious to anyone who takes an intelligent interest in what is going on. The seizure of Iceland by Hitler would be of very great advantage to him in bringing pressure to bear on Great Britain and on the United States."

The President's Day

By International News Service

THAT OLD FOE OF MINE: That former foe and stanch friend of Mr. Roosevelt, Wendell Willkie, startled the Secret Service and correspondents lolling in the lobby by suddenly popping out of the Executive office basement at 12:58 p. m. yesterday.

Taken to the side entrance by a rookie cabster, Willkie meandered upstairs, recognized by the door police but unheralded. Rumpled and smiling Willkie brushed off questioners and followed the the usher into his former-arch-enemy's lair for a long talk and lunch.

TWO FOR ONE: Talked exclusively about effective aid-to-Britain, the Iceland move, the next move. Not much less than an hour and a half later, the tousle-headed Hoosier came out with all the signs of a fine and spirited conversation between two fellows wreathing his broad face. Said the G. O. P. standard bearer of the bitter 1940 campaign. "We had a very pleasant lunch and discussed the international situation at great length. The President described it to me in great detail."

FUEL TO THE FEUD: Presidential Spokesman Early piled more fuel on the roaring feud between Mr. Roosevelt and noninterventionist Senator Wheeler by revealing the gist of a message the President had received from a very harried Prime Minister Churchill. Early said that the official dispatch from the Prime Minister expressed concern that anyone should tip the Allies mit in advance by forecasting military movements as Wheeler did on July 3 by predicting the United States Navy's occupation of Iceland to relieve the British.

ICE CREAM: The President stayed over at the White House yesterday morning to work with lease-lend chief Harry Hopkins, got an early start and worked steadily through from before 9 a. m. until his first appointment at 11:30. Promptly at that time bouncy little Mayor LaGuardia, resplendent in an ice-cream suit and pastel tie bounced in for a chin with the big boss of his new baby, civil defense. Budget Director Harold Smith conferred for a long hour with the President to determine exact size of each division of the impending $4,000,000,000 congressional appropriation for national defense and British aid.

WORK AND MORE WORK: All stops were out as the President pitched in with rolled up sleeves, worked early and late, had dinner with houseguest Hopkins and went back for more work.

Put War Issue to Congress, Wheeler Challenges Roosevelt

Challenging President Roosevelt to submit the issue of a declaration of war to Congress for a vote, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said yesterday he would be among the first to urge unity upon the country for winning the war. On the other hand, if it decided for peace, "then we ought to have unity for peace," he said.

His statement came in response to the release by Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, of information that Prime Minister Churchill had expressed concern to President Roosevelt over the prophecy of Senator Wheeler last week that American forces would go to Iceland to relieve British troops. Churchill's ground was that advance release of such information jeopardized the lives of the British forces in Iceland. Disclosure that American marines and bluejackets were landing in Iceland was officially made to Congress by the President on Monday.

In replying, Senator Wheeler said that if he was guilty of jeopardizing British lives, then the President was equally guilty, for in his message to Congress the President had "indicated quite clearly that with the landing of American troops, the British were going to withdraw."

"Therefore, Churchill's criticism would apply to the President's message as well as to my statement," said the Montanan, who has been the outstanding critic in Congress of the Administration's foreign policy.

In making his challenge to submit the war question to Congress for decision, Senator Wheeler said it was the "honest and decent thing to do" and "the way to obtain unity in this country."

On Monday the White House secretary quoted a London dispatch saying the British were angry at Senator Wheeler's action "in giving away what was obviously a military secret."

Yesterday, Early let it be known that the President had received word from Churchill himself on the subject, transmitted in an official dispatch through the State Department.

The Churchill expression was not actually a protest, Early emphasized, but it did convey the concern of the British prime minister and his government about the advance announcement of troop movements, with the possible imperiling of the lives of the British garrison in Iceland.

"Apparently the White House is very anxious to repeat and give wide circulation to any criticism of me by Churchill and any of the rest of the English ruling classes," Senator Wheeler retorted. "But this is still a democracy and the American people have a right to know about steps which could involve them in war."

'V' Is for Allied Victory— And It's Hard on Nazi Nerves

By the United Press

The British have introduced a new form of warfare against Germany. It is an ingenious and insidious type of propaganda excelling anything the Germans, experts in that line, have thought up.

It started over the British Broadcasting System on July 4 with a call to the occupied nations of Europe to start a reverse "war of nerves" against Germany and use the letter "V" as a symbol of Allied victory.

The "V" symbol, according to the British plan, is to be spread everywhere—by tapping it out in Morse code on the radio, by scrawling it on walls and sidewalks, by using it as a salute.

The original B. B. C. broadcast declared:

"Night is your friend and 'V' is your sign. To Germans and Quislingists it is the writing on the wall.

"They see it chalked on sidewalks, penciled on posters, scratched on the mudguards of German cars. They see flowers coming up in 'V' shape. Men salute with a 'V' sign. The number five is a 'V' and men working in the fields turn toward the village clocks as the chimes sound 5 o'clock."

The broadcast tapped out the Morse code for the letter "V"—three short taps followed by a long one—and then continued:

"When you knock on a door, there is your knock. If you call a waiter in a restaurant, call him this way. If you and your friends are in a cafe when a German comes in, tap out the 'V' sign all together."

The British press service reports that in between Nazi propaganda broadcasts, listeners often can hear the "V" symbol, tapped in Morse code and cut in on the Nazi wave length.

Inquiry to Hear Slain Girl's Fiance

was a suicide that morning that required attention.

"You must have had a hard time solving that," cracked Hebert.

Commenting on the testimony last night, Representative Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, subcommittee chairman, said he was surprised, but added that "Darnall may not be an inefficient officer; it may be that he is just one of those fellows who has a hard time expressing himself in a situation like this."

During the hearing, Hebert insisted that from the "very start" the Strieff case was "badly handled."

Schulte last night promised that regardless of the nature of their observations, testimony of the four reporters will be kept in strictest confidence and there will be no "reprisals."

"We believe those fellows will be able to give us information that will be invaluable to this subcommittee and that will be of immeasurable assistance to us in drafting recommendations for making the Washington police department the best in the county," Schulte said.

"Our session with the reporters will absolutely be behind closed doors. No one will be sitting around the table at that time but members of the subcommittee and reporters."

Asked to appear at 10 a. m. were John Burch, Daily News; Joseph Byrnes, Times-Herald; Theodore Crown, Star and Alfred Lewis, Washington Post.

Long Hours Reported

Under examination by Schulte, Darnall stated that no member of the homicide squad, including himself, has attended a police school for advanced training. Darnall said he has passed the age limit for study at the Federal Bureau of Investigation Police Academy. He learned from experience, he said, while a partner of Inspector Edward J. Kelly years ago.

Darnall declared he believed the squad has done a "very good job." Investigation of murders and other forms of violent death, he related, are not the squad's only duties. He pointed out that one member of the squad must take his turn at "office duty" and therefore is on call for assignment for preliminary investigation of all forms of crime. Furthermore, two of his men are required to spend from midnight to 3 o'clock every morning cruising the streets in an auto.

The seven members of the squad, he continued, come to work at 9 a. m., are given their assignments, return to headquarters for 7 p. m. roll call and then go out on investigations again, working 15 and 16 hours a day.

"More Men and More Cars"

Schulte asked the witness to make suggestions for improvement of the squad's efficiency. Darnall said the squad needs "more men and more cars." Then, after a moment's reflection, he added:

"Oh, yes, a chemist who would be available at all times."

"You don't feel that they (members of the squad) should have more training?" asked Schulte.

"More training wouldn't hurt them."

Schulte then asked the witness his opinion on what steps might be taken by the police to reduce the number of homicides in the District.

"We come in after it happens."

"If you had more men and more equipment would you solve more murders?"

"We need a chemist. There is a man in the department now who considers himself a criminologist. He's an expert on photography and fingerprinting (Ira Gullickson of the identification bureau). He went to that school in Chicago (Northwestern University) but he doesn't give us any help."

Officer Tells of Delays

Representative Maciora (Democrat), of Connecticut, asked Darnall why he needs a chemist, and the officer recited serious delays that sometimes follow when chemical analyses are performed by the Bureau of Standards and other Government agencies where the police department is not given priority. Deputy District Coroner Richard Rosenberg handles laboratory work on his own time and reports back promptly, unless he is busy with his own work, said Darnall.

Representative Copeland, referring to Darnall's testimony about the variety of homicide squad duties, criticized the "jack-of-all-trades" arrangement. He said:

"Instead of men, you need to let your squad work on what it's supposed to do. You certainly have enough homicides in the District to keep your squad busy."

"The homicide squad is just an exercise squad, according to your testimony," broke in Schulte.

300 Persons Questioned

When he got the first call on the Strieff murder, Darnall said, he sent out Detective Sergt. Aubrey Tolson and the photographer. Detective Sergt. John Wise came in a short time later and he, too, was sent to the garage. Darnell then notified the coroner. He instructed his men to telephone developments as soon as possible.

"Since then we have run down every clew and have questioned about 300 persons," Darnall said, adding that the bulk of tips phoned in had been noted by him and assigned to his men for investigation.

Darnall maintained repeatedly that the squad is efficient and once said he had been given "the pick of the department." He was asked by Hebert why he was made head of the squad. He replied that there was "no particular reason" and that he did not consider himself a specialist or "expert."

"Do you think the Strieff case was efficiently handled?" asked Hebert.

"I certainly do."

"Do you think Major Brown is a good police chief?"

"Yes."

Nothing Said to Darnall

"Well, Major Brown was up here last week and told us the Strieff case was not well handled," Hebert said. "So we have come to the point where the superintendent admitted the case was not efficiently handled and nothing has been said to you?"

"No, the Major has not said anything to me about it."

Hebert asked Darnall if he ever heard of "that great Confederate cavalry leader, Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, whose motto was 'get there fustest with the mostest men'." Darnall hadn't heard of Gen. Forrest but he answered brightly, "Yes," when Hebert asked about Napoleon, who said, 'Time is everything.'" Darnall agreed on the importance of time.

"If you had more men would the Strieff case have been solved?"

"I would not say that."

"Don't you think that as chief of the homicide squad you should have taken charge of the Strieff murder on the scene? How did you command your men?"

"From my office. . . . The reason for that is there is work to do in the office that will help men on the street. . . . I devoted all my time to the whole thing. . . . I was in and out of the office . . . I should say I was in the office one-third of the time."

"Then all the squad needs is more men and more cars?"

"That's all."

Capt. Harvey Callahan, of the First Precinct, who last week charge before the subcommittee that a "Gestapo" in the department informs on policemen, was called back yesterday for the purpose of developing views of two members of the subcommittee that a large part of Washington's crime problem is traceable to police leniency with colored persons.

Representative Copeland (Republican), of Nebraska, and Hebert contended, during questioning of Callahan, that colored persons are favored by the police. Callahan agreed that there "definitely are political angles to the colored situation here."

"The people of the District should not be subjected to a crime situation like this," declared Copeland. "The colored people in Washington are close to an Administration that is especially kind to them as a means of lining up votes throughout the entire country."

Hebert and Schulte clashed over the race question and the discussion was continued off the record.

Earlier Schulte maintained that "50 per cent of this trouble could be laid on the doorstep of our judges," and Hebert suggested that the subcommittee walk into Police Court unannounced some day to see how cases are handled.

"The only trouble with that," said Schulte, "is that as soon as they saw us they would start being real judges."

LIEUT. GEORGE DARNALL

D. C. Seeks Law to Drive Out Vagrants, Habitual Criminals

District officials today will begin work on a legislative program to strengthen the city's vagraney laws and provide a statute covering habitual criminals.

Machinery was set in motion by Commissioner John Russell Young as the result of testimony before the House committee investigating the Police Department.

Following a conference yesterday with Commissioners Hazen and Kutz, Young called in Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and instructed him to prepare immediately necessary legislation.

The strengthened law, as discussed informally yesterday, would class as vagrants all persons who are unable to give a good account of themselves—persons obviously without means of support and known to be beggars, gamblers, pickpockets, prostitutes and general "hangers-on" around city parks and street corners.

Young said he had been assured of support in Congress by several members of the House District Committee, including Chairman Randolph.

Also at yesterday's conference was District Budget Director Walter L. Fowler, head of the municipal committee designated to probe efficiency of the Police Department.

Young said he wanted to put "teeth" into the local vagrancy laws and provide stiffer penalties for second and third offense felonies.

Youth Seized As 'Grab-Run' Office Thief

Arrest of an "office creep" who they said admitted obtaining $2,459 from three Washington establishments by the "grab and run" method was announced yesterday by detectives.

The suspect, a 21-year-old colored man, was apprehended by Detective Sergt. Robert J. Maghan, who said he confessed to stealing $1,709 from the Northeast Building and Loan Association, 2012 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, on June 21, by reaching into the cash drawer while attendants were not looking.

The man also admitted that during the following two weeks, by similar methods, he obtained $500 from the T. W. A. ticket office at Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest, and $250 from a machinists' shop on Sherman Avenue Northwest, Maghan said.

Elsewhere in Washington petty crime kept police busy.

Bricks from nearby construction jobs, hurled by a gang of young colored men, caused a near-riot at Third Street and New York Avenue Northwest and sent Blease Gunther, 25, of Charlotte, N. C., to Sibley Hospital with a possible brain concussion.

Mrs. Nellie Forbes, 3220 Seventeenth Street Northwest, reported $30 in $5 bills had been stolen from her dresser drawer.

Wilby J. Pritchett, jr., 4404 Greenwich Parkway, reported $17.45 in silverware stolen from his home.

Eugene A. Roggenmoser reported a bankbook containing an indorsed check for $11.83, $1 in cash and some non-negotiable checks had been stolen from his desk at the McNeil Motors, 1418 P Street Northwest, where he is bookkeeper.

Joseph Samuel, 54, of 415 G Street Northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for mouth and eye injuries. He said he had been attacked in Franklin Park.

Baily West, colored, 28, of 2114 Eighth Street, was arrested on charges of slashing his wife, Anna Mae West, 25, with a knife. She was treated at Freedmen's Hospital through the basement of the apartment house," from which he had been denied admittance previously by the janitor, he said.

"The first detective I saw was the next morning after Betty's body had been found," Le Blanc concluded.

Miss Strieff's Fiance Tells How He Sought Police Action

Stanley Le Blanc, the fiance of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, pretty 23-year-old War Department worker who lost her life at the hands of a sex murderer three weeks ago, told last night how he tried vainly for hours to interest police in a search for his missing sweetheart.

In a quiet voice, dark, 25-year-old Le Blanc, who will testify this morning before the House subcommittee investigating local police, declared:

"I have no complaint about some of the detectives on the case. They did their best . . . but," and he went on to tell how repeated calls to the Police Department Missing Persons Bureau brought only inaction through the long Sunday afternoon his fiancee disappeared.

Called by Girl's Roommate

Questioned in his room at 1426 Twenty-first Street Northwest about the reported delay in investigation of the crime, Le Blanc gave this account of the afternoon and night of Miss Strieff's disappearance:

"I was to go over to Betty's at 4 that Sunday afternoon. About 3:15 Christine (Christine Tankersley, Miss Strieff's roommate) called up. I was taking a shower and couldn't come to the phone, but called her back as soon as I got out, as the other roomer who took the message said she sounded excited."

Le Blanc related how Miss Tankersley said Miss Strieff had been missing an hour after going out to buy some butter. He then hurried over to his fiancee's apartment, 2110 Nineteenth Street Northwest, stopping on the way to "check" several delicatessen stores.

Arriving at the apartment, Miss Tankersley told him she had called the Missing Persons Bureau and had talked to Private Edwin S. Grayson, but without any promise of action.

Called Grayson at 4:15 P. M.

"So then I called Grayson," Le Blanc said. "That was about 4:15 p. m. He told me that he couldn't take the 'responsibility' to start a search. I asked him 'what responsibility?' and he said that publicity would be reflected on Betty. I told him then that I would take the responsibility."

" 'How are you authorized to take the responsibility?' " Le Blanc quoted Grayson as saying, adding, "I told him I was her fiance."

Le Blanc said he called Grayson several times more during the afternoon, urging him to institute a search, and inquiring if any report had been received about Miss Strieff, "He told me that he would get a report from any hospital she might be taken to, if anything had happened to her . . . But nothing was done."

The first policemen he saw on the scene were two scout car officers who arrived at the Nineteenth Street address 'somewhere between 7 and 9 p. m. to help me look

U. S. Clamps Down On Iceland Travel

The State Department said without explanation last night that it will not issue or validate passports for Iceland, where American naval forces landed on Monday, except for officials who have business there.

The department was swamped during the day with requests for permission to visit the island. All were rejected.

Shouts for Absent Policeman Brings Back Stolen Wallet

Dan Healey, 56, custodian of the Police Headquarters garage, has the love of all the Irish for policemen. And he learned long ago to call them when in distress.

Now Healey is a mild-mannered man of about 5 feet 4 and his speech is like that of the natives of Limerick whence he came in 1906.

He had his pay check in his pocket yesterday and he was bound for home, aboard a Seventh Street trolley. At Seventh and E Streets Northwest, according to his statement, "a fat lady with lots of bundles gets on the car."

"I got up and gave her my seat and was hanging to the bar above. At Seventh and H Streets Northwest, my very good friend Dick Cox (Detective Sergt. Richard Cox) got aboard.

"We were talking, but in the crowd we were separated. Everybody was pushing and shoving."

"Along Georgia Avenue we're rolling along smooth as silk. There wasn't any shoving then, but all of the sudden, I get the bum's rush.

"Three colored men hit me and I knew it had happened."

At this point, a witness intervened and quoted Healey as follows:

"Sergt. Cox, block the exits. They've got my pocketbook.

Healey was shouting at the top of his lungs, but also, Cox had left the car, unseen by Healey.

The latter continued to shout, positive his friend Cox would come to his aid.

Healey called through the crowded car and presently, not Cox but his wallet landed at his feet.

The colored men fled at the next stop, empty-handed, but apparently glad to be free of what looked to be certain capture.

They, too, it seems, did not know Cox had left the car.

U. S. Confronts Dr. Auhagen With Diary

Dr. Frederick Ernst Auhagen, a towering, granite faced German without a trace of accent in his speech, assured a District Court jury yesterday that he never was a propagandist for the Nazi government in this country.

On trial for failure to register as a foreign agent, with a possible maximum penalty of $1,000 fine and two years in prison, Dr. Auhagen pictured himself as an immigrant youth who worked in America for an education. Later, he said, he tried to make his way as a writer, lecurer, editor and Columbia University professor. He denied he left Columbia because his propaganda activities provoked objection.

Assistant Attorney General George A. McNulty late yesterday opened up a sharp cross-examination which may last through most of today. Confronting Auhagen with his own diary, seized when the writer was arrested in San Francisco last September, just before his steamer sailed for Japan, McNulty demanded explanation of notes about a trip to Germany in 1937.

The diary contained references to long conferences with officials of the propaganda ministry in Berlin. Dr. Auhagen said his only purpose was to get a job with D. N. B., the German news service, in New York.

While McNulty questioned Auhagen, his colleague, Albert E. Arent riffled through the mountain of printed and typewritten exhibits the Government has placed in evidence. Every few minutes, Arent would hand his partner another bundle of ammunition for questions.

The Post yesterday reported that Prof. Hardy C. Dillard testified he joined the American Fellowship Forum because he "liked the way they did things." This was an error. The statement was made by George F. Bauer, automobile export man.

House May Ease Drastic Bill To Curb Defense Stoppages

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Proposed drastic curbs on defense plant work stoppage were debated for four hours yesterday in the House but faced probable modification of controversial labor sections.

The Military Affairs Committee bill, defining interference with defense workers as "sabotage," and reinforcing the President's powers to deal with defense strikes, passed its first test. A 217 to 148 vote ruled the legislation in order.

But a strong move to substitute the Senate-passed Connally bill, more moderate in approach but empowering the President to take over strike-bound plants, gained headway in the late afternoon.

Both proposals were attached to amendments to the Selective Service Act designed to lower the draft age limit from 35 to 28. This was not in serious dispute and appeared assured of passage regardless of the action on defense labor sections.

Bill Held Too Drastic

With some Administration support, Representative Thomason (Democrat), of Texas, a ranking member of the Military Committee, led the effort to substitute the Connally bill for the more drastic House measure.

Pro-labor members, after failing to kill the rule on the House bill, sought to eliminate all restrictions on labor, leaving only the 28-year draft limit, which they favor.

Chairman Sabath, of the House Rules Committee, took the floor against the rule, charging the House bill was "too drastic" and "anti-labor."

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, followed with a warning that the bill must be passed if "industrial democracy" is to be maintained.

"Isn't this leadership in the time of our country's peril?" shouted the caustic Cox. "I wonder when men in public life will put their country's cause above their own selfish, political welfare."

The Connally bill, passed by the Senate, empowers the President to occupy any defense plant, struck or threatened by strike, after either side has refused mediation. It condemns defense strikes, but reasserts the principle of collective bargaining.

Penalty for Interference

The bill now before the House empowers the President to use the army to protect defense workers, but stresses continued private operation of the plants. Heavy penalties are imposed for interference with workers returning to their jobs, but the right of "peaceful picketing" is maintained.

Leaders were opposed to the bill in this form but were noncommittal on substitution of the Senate measure.

Taking the floor for the House bill, Chairman May of the Military Committee said the President could be trusted fairly to administer the law and "if ever a bill provided for the protection of labor, this is it."

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of New York, countered that the bill authorizes "unconstitutional things." He said it would permit the President "to send the Army anywhere" and destroy labor's legislative gains.

Completing debate on the measure last night, the House will start voting on amendments today.

Rail Span Bill Signed

The White House announced yesterday the President had signed a bill (S. 1904) authorizing the Norfolk & Western Railway Co. to construct, maintain and operate a railroad bridge across the Tug Fork of Big River near Nolan, W. Va.

Rayburn Opposes Amendment To Keep Selects Beyond Year

Flying in the face of a formal War Department recommendation and President Roosevelt's tacit approval, Speaker Sam Rayburn said flatly yesterday he opposed amending the Selective Service Act to hold trainees beyond their one year of active service.

The Speaker's statement was made at a press conference just before the House embarked on five hours of general debate on the Reynolds-May bill. The bill originally was designed merely to reduce the top draft age to 28 years, but was loaded both in the Senate and the House Military Affairs Committee with drastic antistrike legislation.

Although Rayburn declined to comment on the second War Department proposal to remove the Draft Act's limitation against the use of selectees and National Guardsmen outside the Western Hemisphere, he said:

"We have made a contract with selectees that they stay in the service for only one year. I would like to see the law amended so that they can volunteer for further service and I would like to see the Army set up training schools to give them an opportunity for advancement. I am definitely not in favor of amending the law to require their retention on active duty after their one-year term has been served."

The speaker expressed the view that members of National Guard regiments and the Officers Reserve Corps would remain in the service if requested and that a vast majority of the selectees now in training would continue to serve "if we give these boys an opportunity to volunteer and some hope to rise in the Army."

"I cannot comment on the proposal that our troops be permitted to go anywhere in the world," Rayburn said. "As far as Congress proclaiming an emergency is concerned, that is a matter that needs a great deal more study."

Buy Soft Coal Now, Forestall Fall Shortage, Harr Urges

There will be a serious shortage of soft coal by September 15 due to overcrowded transportation facilities, unless there is a wave of consumer buying this summer, Dr. Luther Harr, newly appointed Federal Bituminous Coal Consumers' counsel, said here yesterday.

Revealing that he had issued an urgent appeal to the District Commissioners, the Governors of the 48 States and the Conference of Mayors, asking their cooperation in the quick movement of bituminous coal, the Roosevelt defense-appointee declared that soft coal comprises 45 per cent of the Nation's fuel energy.

"It is much more important than oil to our defense efforts," he said, "and must be moved quickly before other defense demands overburden the country's transportation system."

Dr. Harr stated that the problem was not one of prodution, "but one of distribution." He warned the public against paying exorbitant prices for coal under the threat of an immediate shortage, and said that a legitimate price for bituminous coal here in Washington is $8.50 per ton.

"I have no doubt that there will be an attempt to profiteer," added the coal counsel. "We are going to do everything within our power to keep prices down here and in the rest of the country."

"The public should not be alarmed," he continued. "If people will buy their coal now so as to avoid transportation congestion later on, we can avoid a shortage in September."

A representative of one of the large Washington coal companies, answering Dr. Harr's statement of "profiteering," last night stated emphatically, "There will be no profiteering on the part of the coal companies. If there is any rise in prices, it will be due to the increase in wages for the Southern coal miners."

commodity divisions set up to handle the problems of specific defense industries.

The membership of the labor advisory committee will be nominated by the "predominant" labor organization in the industry, Hillman said. In certain fields, shared substantially by both A. F. of L. and C. I. O., committee members will come from both organizations, he declared.

Chief problem of the committee, he said, will revolve around the displacement of labor from civilian industries whose output is cut by shortages of materials diverted to defense needs. The committees may also serve in an advisory capacity to the Office of Price Administration, on questions of prices, living costs, wages, etc., Hillman intimated.

In the aircraft stabilization project, it was believed that if any agreements are concluded they will unquestionably incorporate marked increases in aircraft labor wages, now substantially below levels of the majority of other defense industries.

Recent agreement, following last month's bitter strike, to raise wage minima in the North American Aviation Co. by 10 cents an hour and to grant a general 10 cents an hour increase to all workers, are expected to be influential.

The huge task of supplying labor for all defense industry, Hillman announced, will be headed by Arthur S. Flemming, member of the Civil Service Commission. The policy-making body working with Flemming will consist of the heads of the United States Employment Service, the acting commissioner of labor statistics, heads of other appropriate agencies in the Labor Department, Federal Security Agency and Federal Works Agency, as well as chiefs of various OPM labor division sections.

Flemming explained that the labor supply branch and 12 regional offices, headed by the regional representative of the Social Security Board bureau of employment security, will be charged with determining exact labor needs of various industries, locations and even individual plants. Depending on the method chosen to meet the needs, certain members of the regional committees representing various Government agencies will be given direct responsibility—either to effect an expanded training-within-industry program, to enlarge vocational or NYA training, or finally, to transfer workers from other plants or even other areas.

The last named method, Hillman explained, would not constitute labor compulsion, because, he said, a worker would willingly shift from a nondefense industry, threatened with curtailment, to a field where work opportunities were increasing.

He added, however, that he hoped to meet the problem by directing defense contracts to plants which might now be working on civilian production but which had men and facilities capable of doing defense work.

Need for Penny Milk Exists Now

What about Washington?

The Agriculture Department's Surplus Marketing Administration, which administers these surplus milk programs, is waiting for Secretary Claude R. Wickard's decision on a proposed increase in producer prices before acting on a penny milk project for Washington.

Should he grant the organized producers' demand for a cent-a-quart rise, chances of the District's getting the project presumably would be lessened, because the Federal subsidy would have to be increased.

In any case, the justification for a 1-cent milk program is as great today as it will be in September. Malnutrition is no respecter of the calendar. If penny milk is approved for Washington, the way is clear to launching it at once, instead of marking time until late September.

The D. C. Coongress of Parents and Teachers and the Consumers Milk Committee yesterday issued statements protesting any increase in the retail price of milk. Both groups have submitted briefs to the Department of Agriculture to that effect.

The P.-T. A., for many years active in providing milk to school children, some of whom receive it free, holds that "producers here should accept the present rate and rely upon it to bring about an increase in the consumption of milk."

The consumers' group warns that if an increase is granted to producers under the Federal milk marketing order, 16-cent quarts probably will be the result.

taken to insure the safety of communications in the approaches between Iceland and the United States as well as on the seas between the United States and all other strategic outposts."

"No Room for Doubt"

A reporter asked what was meant by "all necessary steps."

"You can interpret that for yourself," replied Knox, "but there's no room for any doubt."

The Navy Secretary parried all further queries about the new orders issued to the Atlantic patrol by rereading or referring to the President's statement on this point. His admission, however, that they "go further" than the prior orders to "observe and report" left little doubt in the minds of observers of his meaning.

What "further" steps could the Navy take beyond observing and reporting other than shooting, they asked.

Asked what the President meant by the "all hostile activity or threat thereof" against which the Navy must guard, Knox said that the reporter knew "what that means." The latter said that might be true, but he didn't want to say it on his own authority.

"You don't have to," replied Knox. "You have the words of the President."

"Would the presence of German ships in the approaches to the Western Hemisphere be hostile activity?" Knox was asked.

"I'll leave that to you," he replied.

Knox gave a similar answer to a question as to how his recent speech advocating that the Navy "clear the Atlantic" of the Nazi menace "tied in" with the President's message. Asked if he had the Iceland occupation in mind when he so spoke, the Navy chief declared that he had the "general situation in mind" then.

He said that the Iceland occupation was now entirely handled by the Navy and Marines but that later Army troops would supplement them. The name of the commander of the "task force" in Iceland must remain secret for the present, he stated, but added that the operation was under the general command of Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic Fleet.

Would American patrols operating from Iceland keep to the waters to the west and south of the island, or would they also cover the waters toward Europe, a reporter asked. Mr. Knox declined to answer, saying it would "disclose our plans."

He was also asked: What are the "other strategic outposts" besides Iceland, referred to by the President? Are they Bermuda, Trinidad, or the Azores? the reporter inquired.

"That's something Mr. Hitler would like to know—no comment," replied Knox.

National Defense comes First with Ford and we're glad it does ☆

IN a great new $35,000,000 factory at the Ford Rouge Plant, military airplane engines for America's fighting forces will soon be in full production. In another huge Ford Plant, now under construction at Willow Run, near Ypsilanti, Mich., big bombers and bomber assemblies will be produced at the rate of more than 175 a month. Army reconnaissance cars, army staff cars, big army trucks, and bomb-service trucks for the air corps have already rolled into service from special Ford assembly lines.

The Ford national defense production program is in high gear, setting records for getting things done fast. As Ford dealers we're mighty proud of these records. And we're glad to report to you that at the same time the defense job is being done, Ford is working an extra day a week to meet the great demand for the finest Ford car ever built. New Draft Lottery Set for July 17

The second Selective Service lottery, to determine the order of duty calls for 750,000 21-year-old registrants, will be held in Departmental Auditorium next Thursday, July 17, starting at 7 p. m.

The lottery will be a miniature of the first drawing October 29 when in 18-hour-long ceremonies, thousands of capsules containing serials numbers were drawn from the famous goldfish bowl.

The Nation's second peacetime lottery will take little more than two hours, it is expected. Only 750 numbers are to be drawn, sufficient to cover the board which had the highest registration of 21-year-olds—681, in a Baltimore selection area.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that national selection headquarters had ordered deferments for all men who volunteer for British or Canadian combat units, medical branches or as skilled technical workers.

The order, hitherto unpublished, stemmed from a statement by President Roosevelt, June 24, favoring 15,000 to 30,000 American volunteers for British technical posts and a declaration that any man wishing to join British or Canadian armed forces had a right to do so.

Ceremony Set

As at the original drawing, top-ranking Cabinet and service officers are expected to lead off the ceremonies. War and Navy Secretaries Stimson and Knox, Chief of Staff Marshall, Chief of Naval Operations Stark, and Gen. Holcomb, Commandant of the Marine Corps, have been invited to draw the first capsules.

They are to be followed by representatives of veterans and patriotic organizations as well as by lieutenants, sergeants and corporals who entered the Army via the draft route in the last eight months.

The capsules themselves are to be of a modern fool-proof variety, it was announced.

They will be non-inflammable and with lids that cannot fall off.

Use of this type resulted from fears of some witnesses to the last drawing that sparks from cigarettes in the audience might destroy the valuable capsules, it was reported.

Numbers to Be Integrated

Meanwhile, officials disclosed the manner in which the order numbers of the 21-year-olds is to be integrated with the numbers of their older fellow registrants.

The new numbers will be integrated with the present master list of order numbers by use of an "integration factor."

The integration factor will be determined from the ratio of men not yet inducted from the registration of October 16 and the new supply of men, 21.

For example, a local board may have had a registration of 4,000 last October, of whom 2,000 are now in the Army. It may have had a registration of 200 July 1. The integration factor will be 2000/200 or 10/1.

The first number drawn in the lottery next Thursday then would be placed in the list after present No. 10, the second after No. 20, and so on.

Meanwhile, Washington Selective Service headquarters announced the names of six registrants in Local Board No. 20 who will be sworn in today at Richmond.

They are Arthur T. Western, James E. Quinn, Francis I. Wood, jr., Jean F. Carlton, Robert H. Mangiapane, and Joseph D. Wilson.

General Resigns in Arms Probe

By the Associated Press

Congress was told yesterday that the War Department had accepted the "requested" resignation of a former Army Reserve general—not on active duty—who had received consultant fees from defense contractors.

Julius L. Amberg, a special assistant to Secretary Stimson, testified before a House Military subcommittee that the resignation of former Brig. Gen. R. C. Marshall, of Washington, had been accepted July 3.

Brig. Gen. Brehon Somervell, Army construction chief, had told the committee a little earlier that records showed Marshall had accepted a total of $31,816.67 from six companies or groups of contractors engaged in defense work since the summer of 1940.

Somervell said that Marshall had told a Senate investigating committee that the money had been received for "consultant services" and had nothing to do with obtaining contracts for the concerns.

D. C. Police Free Bullet-Riddled Car Of Japanese

Police last night released from custody the bullet-riddled automobile of Lieut. Masakaza Tukasaki, Japanese naval officer, and closed their investigation.

It was decided to return the car to its owner after a conference at the Third Precinct station between Army and Navy Intelligence officers, an agent of the FBI, Third Precinct police and Tukasaki.

Lieut. Tukasaki, an ordnance lieutenant, who is attending classes in English, mechanical engineering and economics at Catholic University, repeated his story that the bullet holes were in his automobile when he returned from a trip to Shenandoah in June.

The machine, he said, was parked in an alley behind the Alban Towers Apartment, the morning of June 29, while he took a sight-seeing trip with attaches of the Japanese Embassy. When he returned that night, he said, the bullet holes were present.

Condition of the car was called to the attention of police Tuesday by employes of a filling station at Twenty-second and M Streets Northwest.

918 Selects Asked In New Md. Call

Annapolis, Md., July 9 (AP).—Gov. O'Conor announced today that 918 Marylanders—458 white men and 460 Negroes—will be inducted into military service between August 6 and 12.

The induction dates are: August 6, whites 125, Negroes 34; 7, whites 134, Negroes 62; 8, whites 199; 11, Negroes 179; 12, Negroes 185.

A breakdown of the figures showing the number of men to be furnished by each local draft board will be announced later.

'No Man's Land' Area Urged As Aid to Peru-Ecuador Peace

By Wilfrid Fleisher

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The governments of the United States, Argentina and Brazil have proposed to Peru and Ecuador the creation of a "No Man's Land" 15 kilometers wide on each side of the so-called status quo border line as a means of restoring peace between the two warring South American republics, Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, disclosed yesterday.

This proposal was evolved at a series of meetings here in the last two days between Welles and the Argentine and Brazilian Ambassadors.

The diplomats of the three mediating nations were instructed to remind the foreign ministers of Peru and Ecuador that their governments had tendered their good offices two months ago in an effort to prevent the very contingency that has now developed, and to propose, in order to prevent the aggravation of hostilities, that both Peru and Ecuador withdraw their armed forces 15 kilometers from each side of the previously fixed border line.

Welles said yesterday the proposal was a temporary expedient to separate the contending forces, and that it did not imply the recognition of any particular frontier line or area. If this truce is accepted, efforts will then be made to mediate the century-old dispute.

In the light of Welles' hint Tuesday that outside sources might be in part responsible for the outbreak of hostilities between Peru and Ecuador, a report in La Prensa of Buenos Aires, saying it had learned that Peru was using equipment recently imported from Japan and is making intensive military preparations against Ecuador, attracted particular attention here.

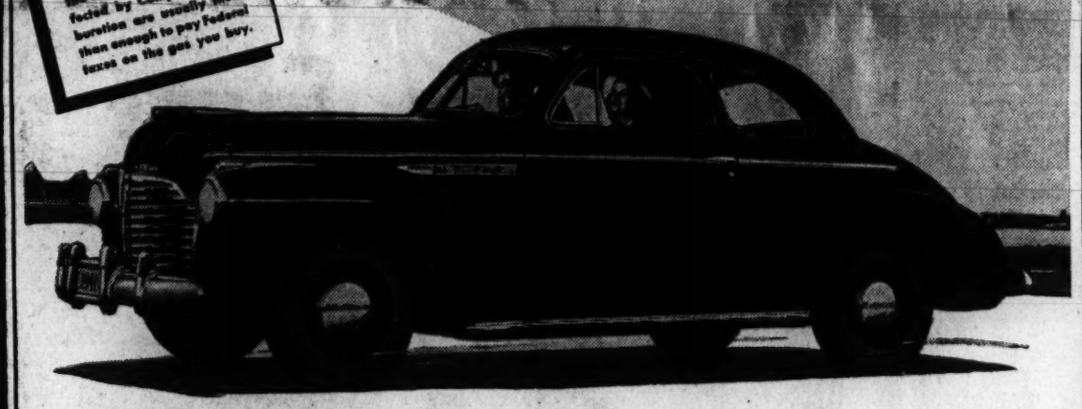
WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

It's there with an Extra Wallop in reserve

PAYS YOUR GAS TAX FOR YOU

At present Federal tax rates, the savings on gasoline effected by Compound Carburetion are usually more than enough to pay Federal taxes on the gas you buy.



SOMETIMES in your automobile you want zip and ginger, sometimes thrift.

Just name your choice. In this high-stepping Buick straight-eight with Compound Carburetion† you can have either, each in its proper place.

You can go about your business in easy, ordinary, everyday travel — and this frugal, two-carburetor system will keep you rolling smoothly with only the forward, thrift-size mixer on the job.

Yet any time you want life, lift, super-power it's there with an extra wallop in reserve—just step down on the treadle and you've got it.

That simple move sends the second carburetor into action.

It steps up not only fuel but the air supply as well. It opens up a reservoir of power no single-carburetor engine of like size can have.

Thus you have your fun — and frugality too.

For all the time, whether one carburetor only is working or both of them together, you get a more efficient mixture than a single mixer can supply.

Thus you go farther on each gallon — owners report mileage figures as much as 10% to 15% higher than on previous Buicks of the same size.

Which means, better go look at the engine that's both thrill-packed and thrifty too. You'll find it in a bigger, roomier, smarter-looking automobile that gives you more value per dollar than anything else you can buy.

$930 for the Business Coupe illustrated above including Compound Carburetion, delivered at Flint, Mich. State tax, optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices and specifications subject to change without notice.

†Available at slight extra cost on Buick SPECIAL models, standard on all other Series.

Current Yen for Comedy Is Given New Impetus

Lahr, Ebsen and Kelly Returning to Races; 'Sergeant York' in Multiple-Premiere July 31; Spot News and Idle Chatter of Amusements

SO THAT'S WHAT has become of Bert Lahr. Some of us have been wondering since the close of the road tour of "Du-Barry Was a Lady," the musical comedy with the prevaricating title, in which he scored such a tumultuous hit both on Broadway and on tour. Now it comes out.

GARY COOPER

Mr. Lahr and his charming wife, it seems, have been resting quietly in Hollywood—if you can call building a modest home that—waiting for the lightning to strike. It finally has. After his resounding hit as the Cowardly Lion in "The Wizard of Oz," the only marvel is that it didn't pick him out long ago. However, he will be coming along now in a strip of RKO-Radio celluloid, bearing the title of "I'm Dying to Live"—a good trick on any man's lot. In it also will be Buddy Ebsen—also away from the gelatins too long—and Patsy Kelly, who hasn't been around too much of late, either.

If what the country wants is comedy, and it seems to be, this is where they ought to find it. In his attenuated and broken-rhythm way, Buddy Ebsen is as droll as Bert Lahr is outrageously funny in his. Along with Martha Raye and Cass Daley, Patsy Kelly may be relied upon for a brand of feminine horseplay that is powered like a Diesel engine. The three of them together should bang the customers right out of their pews.

Funny about this fellow Lahr. Not too many years ago—but plenty, at that—he was a belligerent sort of guy with a hair-trigger temperament and an explosive temper with an instantaneous fuse. He was as easy to get along with as a hornet. He's smoothed all that out now and has evolved a placid philosophy of live and let live that would do credit to the most profound of the psychologists. We had a long talk about it the last time he was here. And he thought it all up out of his own skull. You'd think he was a college professor, instead of a former burlesque comedian who used to wow 'em by main strength and sheer cussedness. More steam to him.

Perpetual, Like That Brook

Since that "former burlesque comedian" business has come up, this is as good a place as any to jot down that contrary to announcement made as late as yesterday, Abbott and Costello, in "In the Navy," will plow into a third week at RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning today. A wire from Manager Hardie Meakin just said so. . . . The same record is being set up by the "Chaplin Film Festival," augmented by "The Flag Speaks," at the Little. . . . And out at the Bethesda Theater, "The Fugitive," costarring Diana Wynyard and Ralph Richardson, has scored such a hit that Sidney Lust is holding it over through today and tomorrow. It goes on three times nightly, at 6:15, 8:05 and 9:55. . . . A couple of mere second-weekers, at the Palace and Columbia, are lightly touched upon elsewhere.

Tonight at 8:30, out at the Hyattsville Theater, in the bailiwick of that name, Mayor E. Murray Gover will present the prizes to the winners of the contest conducted by Manager Dave Ginsberg in connection with showings tonight and tomorrow night of "A Woman's Face," starring Joan Crawford. The winner and runner-up in the competition—as reflected in photographs—for the most interesting face in Hyattsville, are Jean Andrews, age 16, 34 Owens Avenue, and Reinette Dunn, two years older, a native of Cuba, N. Y., now residing at 10 Francis Drive, Hyattsville. They will receive miniature likenesses of themselves on ivory and a 3-month and 1-month pass to the theater, respectively. All this will take place on the stage. Then the show will go on.

From Schoolroom to Stage

It is being bruited about that the beauty and glamour of Isabel Jewell will surprise those who see her as headliner on the stage at the Earle, beginning tomorrow. . . . She is a radiant person, despite having been a dirty-faced captive in "Northwest Passage," a semptress in "Tale of Two Cities," a hard-berled gal in "The Marked Woman" and a defeatist in "Lost Horizon." . . . Spent seven years studying Latin and then taught it to the young ladies attending Hamilton College for Women, at Lexington, Ky. . . . And now is about to publish a novel—yeah, about an actress . . . As they were saying, you'll be surprised. . . . Thanks, Sid, for the tin can and its contents, which will be greatly enjoyed . . . Tommy Rosa, formerly of the Loew theaters in Washington, has been appointed chief cymbal-whanger for the dance carnival Promoter Ray C. Alvis swung into motion in the Riverside Stadium last night to tunes by Jack Corry and his band of "Twelve Senators of Swing." . . . The American Celtic Institute, Mr. A. K. Boyland, of the Congressional Library, president, is about to form a new literary and drama group. . . . Organization meeting will be held Saturday night at Mr. Boyland's home in Cherrydale, Va.

Eleventh-Hour Flash!

"Sergeant York," Warner Brothers' sensationally acclaimed picturization of the life of the No. 1 hero of the First World War, will be given a gala multiple-premiere in Washington on Thursday, July 31, opening simultaneously at the Earle, Ambassador and possibly the Metropolitan theaters. It will be shown at slightly increased prices, but with no seats reserved. Gary Cooper plays the title role, with Walter Brennan and Joan Leslie leading the support. More of this later.

Pooling Their Pulchritude

EVELYN ANKERS, ANNE GWYNNE, HELEN PARRISH, left, center and right, do a little ballyhooing for the California swimming tanks these warm days and speak well for Universal's discrimination. Miss Gwynne, by the way, will be leading woman with Abbott and Costello in their next comedy, something called "Ride 'Em Cowboy"

Palace

To the aid of Uncle Sam's Army has come Bob Hope, as typically American as those armed forces that are so stirring a modern phenomenon. Hope shares the Army with Dorothy Lamour in "Caught in the Draft," beginning its second week on the Palace screen this morning.

It's a swell comedy, "Caught in the Draft," presenting Hope as a wise-cracking, smart-talking chap who shares every American's belief, viz: that we are all lots smarter than the other fellow until, boom, we're tricked into a spot that isn't fit for an alley cat.

In this charade, Hope is a top-flight Hollywood film star, unhappy in his role of a World War I sergeant because he can't stand the noise even of cap-pistols. Through the studio strides a colonel and his daughter, amply played by La Lamour. And into his life stalks the draft. To impress his Army-minded girl friend he pretends to join the Army and is as surprised as the Army to find out he's a legal member. From then on he's a raw rookie.

Columbia

Evidently that happiest of screen marital ventures can outlast even insanity; William Powell and Myrna Loy, Mr. and Mrs. in more films than you can remember, return this morning to the Columbia in their latest comedy, "Love Crazy," wherein madness is a weapon to balance the faltering marriage.

These smoothest of screen farceurs are at their facile best. Such froth as is their fare in this one is not easily bandied about, but the Powell-Loy duo, so long skilled at such work, are superbly amusing with such material. The cool Gail Patrick, volatile Jack Carson and meddling Florence Bates are their fellows on the cast-sheet. Their adventures are started first by the arrival of mother-in-law Bates on their slightly daft fourth wedding anniversary, then by Powell's meeting with Patrick in the uncertain confines of an elevator. After these things nothing is sacred and Powell is forced to plead insanity to keep his helpmate from divorcing him.

Altogether, if you've a yen for smart fun-making, you can't go wrong on "Love Crazy."

HEDDA HOPPER

Learning Their Latin

Hollywood, Calif., July 9. —With Alice Faye, John Payne and Carmen Miranda going through their paces for producer, director and the Cuban consul, there was a different atmosphere about the "Weekend in Havana" set. The situation between us and Latin America has become so jittery that Twentieth Century asked the consul to read the script, then look in on the shooting. And when Carmen Miranda, who's cast as a Brazilian, not a Cuban, found a word in one of her songs that might be misinterpreted in Brazil, she said: "Out with it." And out it went, without argument.

ALICE FAYE

Cesar Romero points out that German propagandists down south are twisting every slip on our part to disrupt that good neighbor policy. If our studios had gone to their Latin-American actors for advice on Latin-America in the first place, Hollywood wouldn't be sitting on a powder keg today. But we seem to enjoy doing things hind-side-before.

In spite of Errol Flynn playing Custer in "They Died With Their Boots On," Sam Goldwyn is going to do the story of Gen. Custer and the Seventh Cavalry at Fort Bliss, with the Government urging him on. Sam's been working on it for two years. Gary Cooper will star.

Roland Young never met Garbo before he was cast in her picture, and is simply charmed with her. She's the easiest person in the world to work with. She's one star who never keeps a company waiting, arrives on the set letter perfect. They did a bit of type casting, putting Connie Bennett in that one.

Oscar Levant must want to play in one of Director Alfred Hitchcock's pictures, with that performance he gave on "Information Please" the other night! Talk about charming the birds! In this case he'll be asking for berries.

Nice to see Cole Porter without a cane, visiting Fred Astaire almost daily. Cole wrote the nine songs to be heard in "You'll Never Get Rich" . . . You'll probably never see him do it on the screen, but in private life George Sanders is a whiz at the piano. Used to be in musical comedy with Noel Coward.

There's a scene in "Honky Tonk" that will make you chuckle. It takes place in a gambling tent with its dancing girls, bar, barber shop, food—everything but beds. Don't know where they found those red plush chairs, but are they photogenic? Clark Gable, as a small town gambler, makes a deal with the lady barbers that whenever they come across a sucker, they put a little notch on the neck of his haircut so when he comes over to gamble, Clark can take him for a ride. On his wedding night with Lana Turner, Clark happens to run his hand through his own hair and finds that one of the girls has notched him!

Friends of Gail Patrick were relieved to hear her promotion to a title in Eastern papers was premature. "Gail Patrick becomes Baroness in November" was a boner. The noble swain's name linked with Gail's is Baron Polan, a Hollywood agent—not a Polish baron! . . . George Raft and Arthur Murray, Hollywood's top rhumba-ers, meet twice weekly and exchange steps. But I'd rather see Raft and Grable do it, wouldn't you?

Elia Kazan, the Greek actor who made his name on Broadway in "The Gentle People" and got such raves in "City for Conquest" out here, has been dubbed "Gadget" by his coworkers. Elia takes his new name philosophically. Says a New York agent wanted to change his name to "Cezanne." When Elia pointed out that was the name of a great French artist, the agent said airily, "That's O. K. After you've been in picture a year, nobody'll remember that guy ever existed!"

Intelligence Wins

New York, July 9.

MAXWELL ANDERSON—Your colleague, Pulitzer Prize-winner Robert E. Sherwood, will have another important job, soon to be announced. For when Col. William J. Donovan is named coordinator of the Nation's intelligence bureaus—the job mentioned here two weeks ago—Sherwood will become his assistant . . . Donovan will work as a civilian, and not as an Army officer . . . Dr. JAMES B. CONANT—Jim Landis, your dean at the Harvard Law School, will return to the government service. Landis' job will be that of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury . . . GARY COOPER—Robert Riskin, Hollywood's highest paid writer, who wrote "Meet John Doe," is planning a flight to London. He hopes to collect material for a significant film story.

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD

FRANCIS BIDDLE—Paul V. McNutt has entered the lists for the job of Attorney General . . . EQUITY—At last week's rehearsals for the premiere of the "Millions for Defense" radio program, Fred Allen studied the list of stars—important entertainers from Hollywood and New York—all of whom proudly contributed their services. "Millions for Defense," said Allen, "but not one cent for talent" . . . MAJ. SASCHA SEVERSKY—Marian Cooper recently spent three months in London, with the Air Forces there, in preparation for Walter Wanger's new picture, "Eagle Squadron." And Wanger's director arrived in London last week. He flew there in a bomber ferried across the ocean.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT—The office of Civilian Defense now is considering a "Defense Button" plan—wherein every worker engaged in any enterprise connected with the Defense Program would wear this button. It would be a substitute for a uniform—a symbol to make the laborer and the flier, the statistician and the sailor, the ROTC boy and the draftsman, all feel that they're part of a democratic job . . . ED FLYNN—Mayor LaGuardia will be a candidate for the mayoralty. On his ticket will be Controller Newbold Morris—the president of the city council, whom Fiorello once called a schlemiel, but who now has been elevated by him to he wise-man status of chochum . . . RUDY VALEE—Frank Fay is en route here, for a radio audition.

ROY HOWARD—Russia at last is opening its doors to American war correspondents. Ralph Ingersoll, editor of PM, is leaving Wednesday to interview Stalin in Moscow. Ingersoll, whose great-grandfather was the American Ambassador to Russia, will first see Chiang Kai-shek in Chungking—and thence a Soviet plane will take him to Moscow. He'll see Churchill on his way back home . . . JIM FARLEY—Your aid, Edward Roddan—the former White House correspondent—is being mentioned for the vacancy in the Federal Communications Commission . . . LIEUT. Army Probes Night Crashes Of 3 Bombers

By International News Service

Madera, Calif., July 9.—The spectacular night crashes of three light twinn-motored Army bombers in San Joaquin Valley farmlands were investigated tonight by an Army board of inquiry.

One of the ships came down to a crash landing and the two-man crews of the other two planes bailed out after the pilots found themselves far off their course, with fuel tanks empty, on the last leg of a flight last ninght from Savannah, Ga., to March Field in southern California.

Second Lieut. N. E. Adams and his mechanic, Corpl. S. L. Norwood, brought their plane to a crash landing in a field 2 miles from Reedley, a small valley town. One wing and the ship's undercarriage were sheared off in the landing, but both occupants escaped serious injury.

Lieut. A. M. Rulison's plane crashed and partially burned near the little town of Trigo. Lieut. J. R. Cables' ship completely burned when it crashed in a plowed field.

The airmen had stopped to refuel at Tucson, Ariz., and their last radio contact with March Field was from the Arizona city last night.

The fliers apparently became confused when they reached California. How they came to wander off their course was a question on which Army officials maintained silence, pending complete investigation.

600 From 29th to Take Part In Ceremonies at Armory

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 9.—Six hundred Twenty-ninth Division troops will participate Sunday afternoon in the laying of the cornerstone for the new National Guard armory in Washington.

The troops will include detachments from the 121st Engineers Regiment, the division special troops and the 104th Quartermaster Regiment, in which there are many District of Columbia soldiers. The 121st Engineers Band will play at the ceremony.

Col. John W. Oehman, commanding officer of the Engineers, will be in charge of the troops.

88th Brigade Begins Maneuvers

Bowling Green, Va., July 9 (AP).—Eight thousand officers and men of the Eighty-eighth Brigade combat team moved out under bright skies today on "warm up" maneuvers, which officers said would run well into the night.

It will be the first action for men of the 176th Regimental Combat team, who arrived yesterday on the A. P. Hill military reservation, while the 116th Regiment, first on the scene, already was out on a practice march.

The units—and the 111th Field Artillery, which also is a part of the Eighty-eighth's combat team—will work independently for this week. Next week they will face one another in mock warfare.

Officers Learn How To Read Air Photos

Brought together from tactical organizations throughout the Army, 74 officers this week started a three-week course in reading aerial photographs at Fort Belvoir, Va. It is the first such course in the United States Army since the World War.

The officers, all representing military intelligence branches of their own organizations, will train additional officers and men in interpreting air photos when they return. Capt. T. A. Fuller, Corps of Engineers, is in charge of the class.

Another Weekend Camp to Be Built

The War Department announced yesterday plans for a second weekend camp for soldiers visiting Washington.

The new camp, to be located on the banks of the Anacostia River near the Eleventh Street Bridge, will be for the use of Negro troops, and will have a capacity of 500 men.

It will be of the same type as the camp now under construction near Arlington Memorial Bridge for white troops.

Yoo-Hooing Soldiers Defended; Gen. Lear Criticized

and any precedent for it. He said Lear's answer may determine whether he will ask an investigation.

"Please advise," asked Kilday, "whether the misconduct came to your attention while in the field with your troops on an important maneuver or while you were on the golf course as indicated by newspaper accounts."

Commenting on the incident, Dirksen told the House:

"Imagine a contingent of 350 healthy, vigorous young American boys in the United States Army, marching by a golf course where some girls are playing golf in shorts, a contingent so devoid of the buoyancy and effervescence that makes the young American a great soldier that someone out of that contingent would not say, 'Hi girls,' or something to that effect?"

"Yet probably because of that conduct a battalion of the Thirty-fifth Division at Memphis was disciplined to walk 15 miles in a 97-degree temperature by Gen. Ben King Lear."

Kilday asked Lear if his disciplinary action "was actually to assuage personal resentment because of remarks directed at you while not in uniform and your identity not known."

"This physical punishment gives strong evidence of your personal displeasure and desire for revenge rather than disciplinary action," he said.

His telegram asked military precedent for "mass punishment of guilty and innocent alike by requiring a long march without an investigation to determine the individual responsibility of the men or an opportunity to be heard."

At Memphis, Tenn., Gen. Lear, according to the Associated Press, last night sent a telegram to Representative Kilday, saying in part:

"As commander of the Second Army, I am responsible for the training of all elements of this army and for raising all elements to the highest attainable standards of conduct and combat efficiency. Nothing less will secure this country's successful defense against thoroughly disciplined, trained and efficiently led hostile forces in case we are attacked.

"Loose conduct and rowdyism cannot be tolerated. . . . I am responsible also that members of the Second Army treat the civilian population with respect and consideration. . . .

"The unsoldierly conduct of this unit while passing through Memphis on Sunday," Lear added, "was in marked contrast to the soldierly and gentlemanly behavior of the vast majority of men" who took part in the recnt Tennessee maneuvers from which the troops were returning to their base at Camp Robinson, Ark.

Lear added that he believed the "circumstances called for prompt and immediate action and under the cirmumstances I saw fit to take such action."

Dodge gives you

FULL-FLOATING RIDE and ALL-FLUID DRIVE

There aren't any sails, or masts, or sea-rigging on Dodge—but she's got mighty propellers amidships. She's the smoothest thing afloat—on the highway. Her power ebbs and flows without the jerks or jolts that go with shifting when you don't want to shift, or clutching when you don't choose to clutch. Dodges float, all right—but they'll float at terrific speed; they're steady and sturdy and low to the ground—they steer a true course. They are full of features made famous by time. They are the leaders in Fluid Drive sales...in their freedom from service...in their price, so low that it throws all other prices out of the new value line.

Why are Dodge drivers laughing so loud at the past? Why do they sputter and fume and act like beginners whenever they drive the old cars of today and yesterday? Why? Because ALL-FLUID DRIVE and Full-Floating Ride are such vital, practical improvements that cars without them appear behind the times and seem extremely hard to handle.

Cotton Textile Ceiling Fixed, OPA Warns

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday served notice that he has no intention of backing down on recently announced price ceilings for cotton textiles despite a storm of controversy and condemnation of the act by Southern Senators and Representatives.

Office of Price Administration officials said that gray cotton goods, to which Henderson's warning was immediately directed, constituted a basic material for sheets, print cloth and bagging, and that price rises would be reflected in higher costs of a long series of household and clothing items.

The warning followed by a few hours a White House announcement that Henderson's resignation as a Securities and Exchange commissioner had been accepted by President Roosevelt. The White House said the resignation, made so that Henderson can devote all of his time to his new job, was effective yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt wrote Henderson that he accepted his resignation "for the very good reason that you are fully occupied with your duties as administrator of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply."

In his statement on cotton textiles, the OPA chief said that certain mills offered to make deliveries at prices above the ceiling on the understanding that the mill would refund the excess if the challenged OPA price order were later found to be valid.

This device, Henderson said, would have the effect of nullifying the price orders, because the buyers would include the increases when they, in turn, sold the finished textiles at levels reflecting "the inflated textile prices existing before the price schedule was issued." He warned that all sellers—and buyers—should abide by the maximum limits lest their acts "force" him to consider both parties as violators.

In other action, Henderson issued a statement declaring that the Maritime Commission had informed him that enough ships will be retained in the inter-coastal service to assure movement of important commodities, and to prevent skyrocketing freight rates.

Flying Straight

Each week that reveals the necessity to keep our hands untied in a world in ferment brings renewed evidence of our intention—indeed, our need—to circumvent the restrictive provisions of the Neutrality Act. The latest example is the Army Air Corps' decision to establish a transport service enabling officials to fly directly from this country to Britain. The law forbids civilian carriers to enter combat zones, but the Army and Navy are under no such compulsion. Logically, therefore, one or the other of the armed services has long been in line to help ease the bottleneck in passenger traffic across the Atlantic. The new arrangement will facilitate our liaison work with Britain. Instead of having to wait for available space on Pan American clippers to Lisbon, and thence north to England via shuttle service, members of defense missions will shortly be able to board American bombers and fly the shorter northern route to the British Isles. Besides facilitating intercourse with Britain, the new service will give Army pilots and crews valuable experience in ocean flying. And on return flights it should prove possible to bring back not only key officials but also civilian pilots who have been ferrying bombers to Britain.

The transports, though bombers, will be "demilitarized"—that is, their war equipment will be removed, permitting more passengers to be carried, and at the same time observing at least the letter, if not the spirit, of neutrality. Considering the extent of our involvement in the war, it is farcical, as The Post has frequently emphasized, to attempt to preserve the legal pretense of neutrality. But this we shall apparently continue to do till Congress takes it upon itself to amend the Neutrality Act so that it conforms more nearly to actual conditions and to the convictions of the American people. Presently United States Army fliers will be landing on and taking off from British fields. Their flights may be technically noncombatant; but the Germans will not see it that way and if we do, we delude only ourselves.

Armistice In Syria

It has become a habit for the men of Vichy to guess wrong. They made that mistake initially when they assumed that France's capitulation to the Third Reich would speedily be followed by the collapse of British resistance. They repeated this tragic and costly error when, following the British debacle in Greece and the German-Italian sweep across Cyrenaica, they decided that nothing could prevent an ultimate Nazi triumph. Hence they concluded that the wisest course for France to pursue was to come to terms with the rulers of the "new order" in Europe.

It was in pursuance of this decision to "collaborate" wholeheartedly with the enemies of freedom that Vichy ordered Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz, commander of the Vichy forces in Syria and Lebanon, forcibly to oppose the entry of British and Free French troops into the French mandated area. In taking this stand, Vichy was clearly playing Hitler's game. But Admiral Darlan and his colleagues were convinced that only by propitiating the Fuehrer could they obtain any concessions from him. However, the only return they have had thus far for this act of betrayal of France's fundamental interests was another casualty list.

This week, at the end of a month of desultory fighting, Gen. Dentz has been forced to ask for an armistice, though his troops were still in possession of Beirut, Tripoli, Latakia, and other important centers in the mandated region. Actually the jig was up for the Vichy forces. Their supplies were running low, their morale was cracking, while no help has been forthcoming from Germany, which happens to have a man-sized war on her hands in eastern Europe. Indeed, the difficulties which the German armies have been encountering in Russia plus the action taken by the United States in Iceland may have persuaded even the self-deluded men of Vichy that a German victory is now anything but inevitable. Very wisely, therefore, they have decided to cut their losses in Syria while there is still time.

Thus, exactly a month after fighting began, the British have won the day in Syria. In so doing they have placed themselves in a position to consolidate their gains in the Middle East, prevent that area from being used as a Nazi base of operations against the Suez Canal, and establish a land frontier with Turkey. They have achieved these objectives at a cost of between 1,000 and 1,500 casualties. These are not heavy losses, considering the stakes that were involved. The pity of it is, however, that the men of Vichy refused to face the realities earlier and welcome the British and Free French to Syria and Lebanon. That would have been in the long-run interests of France, for only through a British victory is a restoration of French independence possible.

They Don't Like It

Till recently the Hitler government professed to view American policy toward the war with Olympian indifference amounting almost to disdain. The repeal of the Arms Embargo Act, which enabled the Allies to purchase arms in this country on a cash-and-carry basis, the exchange of over-age American destroyers for British bases in the Western Hemisphere, even the passage by Congress of the lease-lend bill—none of these measures produced any violent reaction in Berlin. Each had been fought by our isolationists on the ground that it was tantamount to an act of war. On each occasion, however, it soon became evident that Hitler's boiling point, very low in the case of the helpless neutrals of Europe, was very high with regard to the United States.

The reason for this attitude is not hard to find. It is obvious that the last thing Hitler wants is to see the United States become an active belligerent. At the same time he and his spokesmen have always professed the belief that American assistance to Great Britain would never be great enough to make any difference in the outcome. That point of view was reiterated most recently in the interview which Joachim von Ribbentrop gave to John Cudahy. With the American occupation of Iceland, however, the German attitude toward American policy appears to have undergone a decided change. Officially the Wilhelmstrasse continues to maintain an impeccable silence, as well it might, since, after all, the development resulted from an agreement between the United States and the government of Iceland. Nazi spokesmen, however, are not so reticent. They are tearing passions to tatters in expressing their holy horror at this "stab in the back" of a Germany "struggling with bolshevism for the preservation of Western civilization," this "brutal rape of a small European people," this "act of aggression,"

In seeking to express their holy horror over what President Roosevelt has done, Nazi mouthpieces only succeed in reflecting Germany's great alarm. In the circumstance that the United States has assumed the initiative and is moving in the direction both of insuring its security and of making certain the delivery of supplies to beleaguered Britain, they see, and with good reason, the beginning of the end of that hope of victory which loomed so promisingly a year ago and is now rapidly receding into the distance. The American occupation of Iceland is bad news for Mr. Hitler. And, unless we are vastly mistaken, the bad news will come from now on in crescendo.

Power Shortages

Somewhat over a month ago plans for the voluntary pooling of power resources of the TVA system and private power companies operating in the Southeast were made public. But voluntary action evidently has not met the needs of the situation. For a few days ago the Federal Power Commission invoked the emergency powers conferred upon it under the Federal Power Act by ordering the interconnection and the interchange of power of the Southeast's power facilities. The aim is to tap generating resources from Florida to Illinois and from Texas to Virginia. In pursuance of this policy the FPC has called for the immediate construction of seven interconnections between power plants in six States. Thus the initial steps have been taken to establish a great power pool in the Southeast to relieve shortages caused by the extraordinary power needs of the aluminum and other defense industries as well as by a drouth of unusual severity.

As yet there appear to be no acute power shortages in other parts of the country. Yet officials connected with the Federal Power Commission predict that such shortages will eventually materialize and will necessitate the creation of more power pools. In fact, Chairman Olds of the FPC says that the defense program is already being held back by inadequacy of the power supply. Interconnection of power facilities, desirable though that is, provides only for a better utilization of existing power and relief of local shortages. A Nation-wide power deficiency calls for additions to generating capacity which will take considerable time to construct. New hydroelectric facilities, for instance, call for more generating equipment. Yet manufacturers are said to be already loaded down with orders which will take many months to complete. Moreover, materials for construction of equipment are scarce. There is also need for more steam-generated power plants to supplement the uncertain hydroelectric power output. This, in turn, requires assurance of adequate fuel supplies—which may not be available because of the strain imposed upon our railroad and shipping facilities.

In all likelihood the Southeastern power pool is the initial stage of a Nation-wide development along regional lines such as Senator Norris has long desired. But, as the Senator himself admits, such a program would take a long time to complete. Meanwhile, if the Government's experts are to be believed, the Nation will be forced to submit to a good many local blackouts and endure other inconveniences in order to satisfy the power needs of defense industries—needs which have proved to be so much greater than was originally anticipated by our defense planners. Some States in the Southeastern area have already instituted voluntary curtailment of power consumption for nondefense purposes. And the FPC has issued an appeal to other Southeastern States to follow their example and release power for production of strategic defense materials. Here is a foretaste of what lies ahead!

Blondes Preferred

The War Department, it seems, is hunting for blondes with "hair of soft texture and the highest quality not less than 12 inches long." It is explained in a vague sort of way that such hair is needed for "delicate meteorological instruments," connected with the national defense. Ho, ho! Can it be that the blonde is our newest secret weapon?

Well, sir, as to that we can tell you that the long-haired blonde has always been a most potent weapon, though we had not supposed there was anything secret about her. By a sure intuition poets and painters have always represented our Mother Eve in long golden tresses, and you know whose weapon she was. There was, by Homeric testimony, yellow hair of "soft texture and the finest quality" above the face that launched a thousand ships and burnt the topless towers of Ilium. In other words, the fair Helen combined all the advantages of a naval expansion program and an aerial blitzkrieg. Then there was the Nordic lady who, you remember, used to sun herself on the rock in the River Rhine, and so wrought such incalculable havoc upon shipping that the tonnage losses have never been fully computed. What a help she would be now to Hitler in his Battle of the Atlantic! And, of course, there were also young Goldylocks—that cute little saboteuse!—and one Rapunzel whose hair, if we remember, was so useful in Fifth Column activities.

With gold in her garment gleaming
As she combs her golden hair,

That the War Department has awakened at last to the lethal efficacy of the blonde is an encouraging sign. A few battalions of baby-faced blondes from Hollywood and the beauty carnivals, trained as parachutists and dropped secretly behind the enemy lines, would almost certainly cause great demoralization there. But we trust that our own antiblonde defenses are not being neglected, though, as we read of what happened the other day to the brave lads of the 110th Motor Transport Battalion, we have some doubts. Odysseus, inspired leader that he was, took care to stop up the ears of his men with wax and to lash himself to a mast as his ships approached the siren-infested coast. Surely if Lieut. Gen. Lear had been as wise—if he had only had the forethought to provide his men with horse blinkers—history might not have recorded that unhappy episode at the Memphis golf links. Let us learn from that bitter experience. Let us make blonde-proof blinkers as much a regulation Army issue as gas masks or bullet-proof helmets.

YOUNG BRITISH ARCHITECT

Now that the world is shaking into dust
Pillar and pediment, tower and spire and arch;
Now that the walls of our determined trust
Buckle and bend, and all the young men march;
Now I will set the rule and pen aside
That were my pride.

Nothing but time is lost; in a brief space
Column and capstone shall rise from the plinth of earth,
Conceived in the shining hearts of the future race
That the sorrowing mothers of now will bring to birth.
Lad, you may handle the rule that I thought to save
When I built me a grave.

Somewhere in nowhere, past the track of wars,
Marbled with sunset and dawn, and the roof moon-beamed,
I shall vision and build a home on a street of stars
More lovely and firm than any on earth I dreamed,
And cities may mount again on what was I
When death dropped out of the sky.

Food Costs

We have all read about strikes for more money and shorter hours, for better working conditions, etc., most of which are inspired by people who wish to delay our defense program. We have read about prices on the materials needed for national defense and about regulating prices on these materials. How about your paper, and all other papers in Washington, putting on a campaign to stop the slow but sure rise in the cost of our most important raw material for national defense—food.

Most of the people of Washington are either working for the Government or serving those who do, or are dependent on the Government pay check in their family or group. Most of these people are working steadily, and have been working, but the salary or wages are not high and they are not going up to meet the rising cost of food which they must have in order to do their work well. Let us see some directed campaign to stop and reduce the excessive cost of food. ROBERT C. SNOW.

The Four Freedoms

Senator Wheeler, speaking with his usual ignorance of facts of history, said on July 4th, in Buffalo, that "neither the people nor Congress are willing to risk their lives to establish the four freedoms in Russia, China, or India, where they do not and have not existed."

Thus, in one fell lie, Mr. Wheeler has swept every vestige of freedom of speech, of the press, and of religion from the whole history of territory inhabited by almost one-half the population of the world.

Does Senator Wheeler think that China, the land which has been the birthplace and the home of many of the world's greatest faiths, is a land that has never witnessed religious freedom? Does he think that the great wealth of Russian literature was "passed by the censor?"

Mr. Wheeler will soon be trying to deny the existence of the four freedoms in the history of Great Britain and her other Allies.

Straddling?

Mr. Hoover destroys his own case for keeping out of war with one sentence. "Give every aid we can to Britain and China."

If he advocates this course (which he was dead against last year) he automatically admits that he is concerned and considers that this country is concerned with the outcome of the war. If this war is not our war, there is obviously no reason at all why we should tax our people to assist one side against the other. Yet Mr. Hoover advocates this course. If he thinks that a British victory is of sufficient importance "to give every aid we can," then apparently the war is our war. If the war is our war, we must not shrink from the sacrifices which active participation would entail. But Mr. Hoover cannot bear to think of the sacrifices, so he invents a course, the reason for which is based on purely wishful thinking, "because we can be of more service to Britain if we stay out of war." The reason for this, he explains, is that if we enter the war, we shall have to keep for our own defense in this country various supplies which could go to England or China if we remain at "peace." He therefore excuses the United States from taking any course which would involve sacrifices. And he does this in the very same speech in which he explains at great length that our only possible enemies, Germany and Japan, cannot in any way attack us!

He is on the horns of a dilemma. "All aid to Britain and China," but we must stay out of the war. This is an impossible straddle. To admit that we are vitally interested in the outcome of the war, but that we are not going to make any sacrifices to bring about the desired result is a hypocritical course not worthy of the dignity and self-respect of the United States as a great nation, founded through sacrifices upon the ideals of freedom and democracy.

D. C. Police

The present investigation of the District Police Force is a disgrace to this city, the Capital of the country. Being a native Washingtonian I have long seen the need for a larger and more efficient police force. Why wasn't something done years ago to protect a city of people who have no say at all in the land in which they live—a city made up of people from all parts of the country, here to earn their living, without sufficient protection. This city is growing larger every day and something should be done to enlarge the force in proportion.

Perhaps if the men were given a livable salary, it would give some incentive for the men already on the force to work with more enthusiasm. These men go out every day in all parts of the city and risk their lives, while others, drawing high salaries, sit safely in an office. I know of one policeman who has been on the force around twenty years; yet he only receives $2,400—$500 more than he received when he first joined, an increase of $500 for nearly twenty years' service.

That, to me, is a disgrace to Washington, and yet what can the people of Washington do about it? Nothing, but sit back and listen to what's going on. The trouble is that those in power are expecting something for nothing and that is hard to get. I say, enlarge the force in proportion to the population and also increase the salaries of those on the force in appreciation of their years of faithful duty.

If Hitler Died?

It would be most interesting to watch the psychological effect Hitler's death would have upon both the English and German people. If the German people (through clever propaganda appealing to their strong nationalist feelings) could be persuaded to carry on to ultimate victory and fulfill their Feuhrer's "last wishes" there is a possibility that Hitler's death could be disastrous to the British Empire.

So far the English have concentrated almost all of their hatred upon Hitler and not upon the German people; therefore, if Hitler died it may be assumed that much of the will to continue the war against the German people would be lost. A weakening of a warring people's major weapon, the will to fight, could not help but be disastrous. It is evident that the English people's high morale has been their best weapon thus far, providing the will to carry on during the darkest of moments. But without an Adolf Hitler to wreak their hatred upon, what would happen in the British Isle during the dark days of the future?

Of course Hitler's death could and probably would result in a general demoralization of all Europe and the war could be won without the use of further armed might. Immediately following Hitler's death, elements now subdued would become aroused and would result in internal conflicts that would prevent Germany from carrying on the war.

This would mean a peace at England's terms and a hollow but a mighty important victory for the British Empire.

'Shame'

On the front page of The Post this morning, is pictured a girl pouring milk from a large can on the ground, to prevent its getting to the New York City market! The word "shame" should have been printed in large type after her action over the picture. It is criminal waste of a necessary food for babies and children to do such an outrageous thing.

We have heard of "Health for Defense," and "Conservation for Defense!" Such acts don't look very much like it! If we act that way we will not be worth defending—our reward will be down and out, with the hordes who are being sent that way today! Why not make America worth saving?

Reviews Supreme Court Controversy

By the grace of time and the old method of appointment the departure of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes balances a page in the Supreme Court controversy, but the account is not closed out. The President has named the significant number of six justices to the court, and even a seventh, but thereby nothing is settled. The kernel of the controversy, deftly hidden under the outer shell of "the Constitution's integrity," was the allegation, reciprocally made by both sides, that the method of appointment can and does influence the decisions of the court.

The "old" court took cognizance of this allegation. Through a number of later decisions admission was made that it must bend to changing times and ideas or be rightfully suspect. Even before the younger judges came in, the court veered from anti-New Deal to partial conformity and finally to all-out New Deal. The tardy change did not close the dispute. The proof offering that even a most conservative court was sensitive to the need of adjustment was met with a challenge that it only proved predilections and whims had, in the past, influenced decisions.

Now, with almost all the old court members gone, and with the evidence before us of what would follow their retirement, we can look back coldly upon the historic battle and reappraise the flaming passions which greeted President Roosevelt's startling yet simple plan.

What was the essence of his plan? How many of its opponents followed through its probable effect? By naming an additional six justices he meant to keep the Court intact—to remove no man then sitting—while a set of younger minds, from the generation upon which devolved the burden to survive and repair the recent debacle, was introduced into its convocations. When in due course an elder justice went out, his place was to be taken by a man already sitting in the Court, initiated into its spirit, traditions and methods of procedure.

Had the plan come into being, the same or similar men would be serving as are sitting upon the bench today. But there is this important difference—the singly appointed men have missed the contact, the enlightenment and inspiration, and, most importantly, the conservative influence of an intrinsically conservative Court.

Blinded by suspicion of the President's motives, we could not visualize the preponderant and beneficial influence of the experienced older men on the decisions of the new. Nor could we imagine the revived interest, in the newer problems, of the older jurists when the fresh vision of a later day was unfolded in their deliberations. The change of attitude in the Court while the debate was on proved that the old Court was ripe for such influence. And who will question that its conservatism and legal experience was needed to steady the political impetuosity of the newer men?

By the rejection of the President's proposal was lost the chance of compromise within the Court. The chance of easy transition from the old to the new was lost. But beyond this was lost the chance of laying by the heels the ugly charge that all new justices, whoever they might be, unless they were chosen from anti-New Deal sources, can not and will not render impartial and nonpolitical judgments.

In this regard the account has not been closed. It could have been settled had the Supreme Court of Chief Justice Hughes, sensing the way of wisdom and courage, said at the start of the controversy, as it was asked to say, "Appoint the new men now. We welcome them in our midst all together—just as we would welcome them separately."

The Post Impressionist

Birth Of R. F. D.

A box nailed to the side of a church at Four Corners in Iowa progenited America's rural mail delivery. [I cannot find authority for the use of that verb, but it is expressive and should be in our lingo, so if remains as written.]

Six persons in Poweshiek County, where the tall corn grows, formed a club in the late 1880's, the duss being a trip to the nearest town of consequence. Abe agreed to go on Mondays, Perry on Tuesdays; others were assigned for the remaining days of the week. The duty of each club member called for a visit to the village post office and the collection of mail for all six. When passing Four Corners on his way home of an evening, he would deposit letters, newspapers, catalogs, almanacs, etc, in the communal box, from which depository the other five members would extract each his quota when convenient.

The "Perry," whose turn came on Tuesday's, later became a newspaperman and politician of some prominence, serving his party so well that he became "literary manager" of the campaign that resulted in the election to the Presidency of William McKinley. Reward for his services then took form in the appointment of Perry S. Heath to the office of First Assistant Postmaster General.

There came a day when, seated in his swivel chair beside a desk that bore evidence of importance, the Perry-of-the-cornfield recalled that bov at Four Corners and he thought it might be a good plan to establish boxes elsewhere.

So he looked about him, asked questions, and discovered a fund of $10,000 that had been appropriated by Congress during the second Administration of Stephen Grover Cleveland, a fund earmarked for experimental purposes to determine how rural communities might be better served by post office employes.

Perry-of-the-Tuesdays learned that this fund was intact; that no one had been assigned to make any such experiment, and he decided to try his hand at it. With that in mind he wrote his cousin, Dr. S. W. Heath, of Brooklyn, Iowa, requesting him to ask the farmers how they would like to have mail delivered at their homes.

The good doctor backed his roan mare between the thills of his phaeton, fastened some buckles, gave the signal "all-aboard" by a touch of the whip on the roan's back and started on his mission. His first interview was somewhat discouraging. The farmer spoke adversely, and, when questioned why, admitted no reason existed except that it would interfere with his plans. "Goin' to town for the mail" had often been an excuse for a visit to the grocery where kindred spirits foregathered to discuss political affairs—town and village meetings all over America which had much to do with the country's future.

The second person questioned said that it might be a "right, smart good thing," but he could not afford the additional expense.

"It won't cost you a cent extra," said Dr. Heath.

Still the farmer demurred. He did not think it right for the Government to undertake such additional expense.

"But," continued the physician, "the Government is spending millions building levees along the Mississippi River for the benefit of Southern farmers. Why shouldn't something be done for us in Iowa? Besides, this having mail delivered at your home will increase farm land values by $5 or $10 an acre."

Bill Sykes' eyes glistened. The medico had struck a chord that touched his heart. "Say, doc, if you really think so put my name down for it, that is if you're sure it won't cost anything extra."

The roan mare traveled some distance that day and in the evening Dr. Heath wrote a letter to Perry-of-the-Tuesday's that caused him to fish in the Treasury for that $10,000.

Three months after that rural route was started in Iowa, he received a letter from Bill Sykes saying that it was the best thing the Government had ever done for farmers, and if the Government "is afraid to continue, we in Poweshiek County will put up the extra money."

Authority for statements made in the foregoing paragraphs is to be found in "Heath Family History," a book of 112 pages. It is the only copy in existence, for every word is written in a fine Spencerian hand. Completed in 1910, it has become a family heirloom. Pasted inside the front cover page is an article written by the author, Dr. W. S. Heath, who writes about his first day at school, using the third person:

"He is accompanied to school by his mother, who remains with him during the first hour. His first lesson is the 'Johnnie Storie' and the lamb, which introduces the short sound of 'a.' His first work was making slanting lines on his slate. His next work was writing 'a' on the board which he afterwards copied on his slate. In the afternoon they sang the sound of 'a' up and down the scale. The class is composed of ten about his age (which is 6). The class was dismissed at 3 o'clock. He came home well pleased with his first day in school."

Toward the middle of this book Dr. Heath describes his success when canvassing the countryside for the plan of rural mail delivery espoused by his cousin who had been Perry-on-Tuesdays. "The first carriers," writes the doctor, received only $25 a month for what the carriers now (1910) receive $75 for doing."

He relates that farmers in an adjacent county had written their Representative, John F. Lacy, asking him about rural mail delivery, and Lacy had replied that he recalled having voted for an appropriation to carry on an experiment, "but it would never do to make it general as it would bankrupt the Government."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Iceland And The Atlantic

THOSE WHO dislike the American occupation of Iceland should imagine how they would have felt if they had learned instead that the Nazis had landed in Iceland. This is the acid test of the Government's action: Is it better that the Americans or the Nazis should be established in Iceland?

LIPPMANN

BEFORE DENMARK and Norway and France were invaded, the United States did not have to worry about Iceland or about Greenland or about Newfoundland or about Ireland or about the British Isles or about the Azores, the Cape Verdes, or Dakar. These stepping stones from Europe to America were held by friendly nations. The Axis was locked up in Central Europe by the power of the British fleet and the French army.

The occupation of Scandinavia, the collapse of France and the turnabout of the Vichy government radically altered the whole situation. In the last 12 months the paramount American question has been whether American public opinion would sanction the measures that are necessary in order to counteract the dangers created by Hitler's victories in France and in Scandinavia. Experience has shown that the people have been reluctant to approve the necessary measures while they were being discussed theoretically but that they have approved overwhelmingly the specific measures when actually undertaken.

THUS A YEAR ago there were fierce outcries at the first of the series of measures to redress the balance after Hitler's continental victories: It was necessary 12 months ago to transfer destroyers to Britain to make up for the desertion of the French navy and it was necessary to establish American bases in the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Trinidad. This transaction which was denounced by some as outrageous war-mongering is now almost universally approved as wise and prudent statesmanship.

The second series of measures was proposed a few months later —the lease-lend program and the opening of American navy yards for the repair of British warships. Again there was strong theoretical objection: In the end there were not, according to Senator Vandenberg, more than five or six members of the Senate who did not vote for some form of aid to Britain. The American people had realized that the survival of Britain was an American interest and the courage of the British people had convinced them that, with help, the British would survive.

THE NEXT MEASURE consisted in the American occupation of Greenland. There was no substantial objection from any quarter: The American people looked at the map and saw that if we did not hold Greenland, a victorious Hitler would.

Greenland was followed by the Presidential declaration of May 27 which served notice on the Axis and upon the satellite governments, particularly Vichy, that not only Newfoundland and Trinidad and Greenland but all islands in the Atlantic and all jumping-off places for raiding and for conquest were within the sphere of the vital interests of the United States. The isolationists have said many harsh things about the President but they have never ventured openly and directly to challenge this momentous declaration of American policy. For few if any among them would wish to take the only alternative position, which is to say that they would not object to seeing Hitler's air force and submarines established in Iceland, Greenland, Ireland, Britain, the Azores, the Cape Verdes and Dakar.

THE OCCUPATION of Iceland is, therefore, no sudden departure. It is rather a stage, to be sure a very important stage, in the development of a policy which became the inevitable and necessary American policy after Hitler's victories last year. That policy is to exclude Hitler from the Atlantic Ocean by the combined action of Britain and the United States.

For the Atlantic Ocean is one ocean, not two oceans divided by an imaginary line between the "Western" and "Eastern" Hemispheres. There can never be peace in the Atlantic nor genuine security in the Western Hemisphere unless all the strategic positions on the shores of this ocean are strongly held by friendly powers. If one shore were held by the United States and the opposite shore by a hostile coalition, there could be no peace. The Atlantic is too narrow from east to west and it is also too long from north to south to be a peaceful sea unless it is dominated entirely by friendly and trustworthy nations. A dubious navy on the other side of the immense Pacific is bad enough; a hostile navy across the narrow Atlantic would be intolerable.

ICELAND, it is obvious, is one of the points that must be held if the Atlantic Ocean is to be made secure. It commands the route from North America to the British Isles and to Scandinavia and Germany. But we must be under no illusions about Iceland as an "outpost" of North America. Iceland is an outpost only if the British Isles are invincibly held. So while it is true that the control of Iceland is vital to the defense of North America and of Britain, it is equally true that the power of Britain is indispensable to the defense of Iceland. If Hitler took Iceland, he would gravely threaten Britain and the whole North Atlantic; if Hitler took Britain, it would be impossible for us to defend Iceland.

What this goes to prove is what almost every serious student of American defense has always known: That the defense of the Western Hemisphere requires the survival of a powerful and friendly Britain, and that what we call with unjustifiable condescension "Aid to Britain" is literally and exactly the defense of the Americas. These are not two separate and different things: They are, as Jefferson, Madison and Monroe knew more than a century ago, the same thing, and some fine day in Washington and London there may yet be performed an act of statesmanship in which there is defined and proclaimed the fundamental truth that the security of the Americas and the security of Britain are reciprocal, each being indispensable to the other.

On that day the foundations of law and order in the Atlantic world will have been laid down.

Export Tale Is Denied

Keynes Explains

JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES, economic advisor to the British Treasury, revealed yesterday that a "drastic" drop in British export trade in the past five months has cut shipments of bulky goods from Britain by one-half.

"We are now keeping our exports down to the minimum required," said the mild-mannered economist who has been in this country two months to consult with the United States on operations of the lease-lend law.

Keynes granted an interview to The Washington Post in order to discuss reports that British traders have been reexporting American lease-lend supplies to South America, where they would compete with the products of United States firms.

He was not aware of any such cases of Britons reexporting lease-lend goods or their equivalent, and he urged all foreign traders to report immediately to the British Supply Council in Washington for investigation any instances of such transactions that may be reported. But some cases of finished products which use similar raw materials are, of course, inevitable, he said.

Keynes' attention was called to a charge by Representative James F. O'Connor (Democrat), of Montana, in a speech before the House Monday, that American exporters are alleging the English are reselling steel and other lend-lease goods to Latin America.

THE BRITISH economist pointed out that figures cited by O'Connor were for 1940, and, he said, the Congressman's figures antedated the collapse of France in June, 1940, and the enactment of the lend-lease law in March, 1941.

"This year," said Keynes, "the volume of our exports to South America has fallen by half and are no more than required to pay for our essential imports."

Citing an example of a specific commodity, Keynes said that the total of British exports of iron and steel and iron and steel manufactures to South America averaged only 6,000 tons a month in the first five months of this year. He said that this was one-half to two-thirds lower than in a similar period before the war.

THE SEGMENT of iron and steel trade still carried on by Britain with South America was unimportant, Keynes said, and the traffic was composed mainly of spare parts for existing machines, and similar material.

Total exports of machinery and parts to all of South America during the first five months of 1941, he said, were just over 1,000 tons a month, compared to double that amount before the war.

Terming the decline in British export trade within the last few months "drastic," Keynes said, however, that as an integral part of the war effort the British government has tried to maintain exports of textiles. This commodity has been selected, he said, because it employs mainly female labor and takes comparatively little shipping space. In order to maintain textile exports, said the British official, home consumption has been drastically reduced by the rationing of clothing.

IN THE FIRST PART of 1940, before the start of the German blitzkrieg in Western Europe, Great Britain "by a tremendous effort" was maintaining its export position, Keynes said.

In 1940, said Keynes, his country had "both the capacity and the necessity" to export. But the collapse of French resistance and, later, the start of lend-lease operations changed those conditions, he asserted.

O'Connor yesterday introduced a resolution demanding a Congressional investigation of the entire $7,000,000,000 lease-lend program. His action was timed to anticipate a request by President Roosevelt—expected this week—for billions more to continue operations under the aid-to-Britain program.

O'Connor, addressing the House on Monday, had said "it is unthinkable that English exporters should commit such reprehensible acts at the expense of the American taxpayers."

Ukrainian Drama

Nazis Carry Out Old Plans

IT IS GENERALLY believed that the German-Ukrainian adventure ended with the evacuation of Ukraine by the German forces in November, 1918, and that it was resumed by Hitler. This belief is incorrect. After Germany's defeat in the west, German political, military and economic leaders hid in secret drawers of their desks their Ukrainian plans. They, never, however, abandoned them.

Germany's experience in the Ukraine in 1918 had been an unhappy one, for she had been unable to obtain from them more than 9,293 wagonloads of grain, 4,567 wagonloads of minerals and 23,195 wagonloads of fodder and different foodstuffs. It was but one-fifth of the quantity the German-sponsored and controlled government of Hetman Skoropadski had committed themselves to supply.

The Ukrainian peasants sabotaged the agreements and the requisitions, they massacred German detachments spread over the country in Ukrainian villages, and they made necessary numerous "punishing expeditions."

The Germans remained, nevertheless, convinced that only the lack of time was responsible for the failure of their Ukrainian experience. Had they had a few more years, they felt, they would have been able to organize a rational exploitation of Ukraine's agricultural and mineral riches. They would also have been able to get hold of Caucasus and its oil.

THE FIRST YEARS after the Versailles Treaty Germany was, however, powerless. She gave refuge in Berlin to Hetman Skoropadski and all those Ukrainians who helped her in her Ukrainian adventure, but, otherwise, could do little.

The western democracies were meanwhile playing a very active part in Russian affairs. They were supporting the White Russian movement against the Soviets. But they were also supporting the Poles and maintaining contacts with Ukraine's socialistic government fighting against the Communists.

The situation was pretty confused, but was clarified to an extent, however, in 1921, when the Soviets established their power over all the country. The Soviets resented the assistance given by the western democracies to the White Russians. The White Russians, on the other hand, were embittered against the western democracies, accusing them of having given insufficient help. And the Ukrainians were still more embittered against the western democracies. London and Paris let Poland take not only the Austrian Eastern Galicia, but also the former Russian Wolhynia, in both provinces of which the Ukrainians represented 70 per cent of the population.

The situation was undoubtedly getting brighter for Germany and Berlin decided to make the best of it. The Rapallo Treaty (1922) assured Germany the possibility of cooperation with Russia. Simultaneously Eastern experts of the Wilhelmstrasse were confidentally saying to Skoropadski and Gen. Peter Krasnov, the pro-German "ataman" of the Don Cossacks, to be patient and to wait for further developments.

On the other hand, there was nothing to be done with the Ukrainians in Russia, to whom the Soviets had granted a pretty large linguistic autonomy. But a Ukrainian minority of six or seven millions in Poland was most welcome to Germany. Poland was, indeed, at that time Germany's most hated foe.

BERLIN EXPERTS on Ukrainian problems concentrated all their attention on Polish-Ukrainian relations. They did their very best to stir up Ukrainian extremists against the Poles. They were unfortunately, helped in this by the errors of Warsaw government who stubbornly refused the slightest form of autonomy to the Ukrainians in Eastern Galicia and Wolhynia.

Vienna became the main center for anti-Polish Ukrainian activity. Maj. Jarosh, former chief of German intelligence service in Ukraine, made regular trips to Vienna.

In 1927 the leaders of the Ukrainian extreme nationalists, mainly from Galicia, gathered at a convention in Vienna. They created the Organization of Ukrainian Nationalists, which was going to be known under its initials O. U. N. The leader of O. U. N. was Eugene Konovaletz, a Galician Ukrainian and former colonel of the Austrian army. He first fought the Bolsheviks, but later turned all his hate against the Poles.

In 1928 Maj. Jarosh, in Berlin, became chief of the special Ukrainian office with the war department. A close contact was established between Maj. Jarosh's office and Col. Konovalet's O. U. N.

Sabotage, terroristic acts and political assassinations in Poland were the fruits of this cooperation. When in 1930 Warsaw decided to "pacify" Galicia by punishing expeditions, the Polish-Ukrainian strife reached its climax. Numerous terrorists and German agents were introduced by O. U. N. into "Maslosoiuz," the mighty Ukrainian agricultural cooperative organization i nGalicia.

MEANWHILE Hetman Pavlo Skoropadski was quietly living in his Wannsee villa, near Berlin. His exile was shared by his wife, his son, Danilo, and daughter, Oxana, a talented sculptor. The Hetman and his family utilized their exile to gain proficiency in the Ukrainian language and to maintain and develop contacts with German officials and conservative political circles.

Count Werner von Alvensleben, who had represented Kaiser Wilhelm with the hetman in Kiev, became a prominent member of the "Herrenclub"—Von Papen's social and political conservative organization. Von Alvensleben was one of Skoropadski's best contact men in Berlin till he was killed in the Nazi purge of 1934.

The German government was paying a pension to Skoropadski. The pension was, however, quite modest, which led him once to attempt a new alignment to receive more money, this time from non-German sources.

In 1932 he received a visit from his friend, V. Korostovetz, former Russian official of the Czarist regime. Korostovetz was living in London. He came with a business proposition to Skoropadski. Certain British circles, interested in the possibility of securing Skoropadski's cooperation in case of any changes in Russia, were prepared to raise money for a "Fund for Ukraine's Freedom."

An agreement was signed in April, 1932, in London. Skoropadski was going to get 15 per cent of the raised funds and Korostovetz and his English middleman were going to get 7½ per cent each. The rest was to be utilized for the "Fund for Ukraine's Freedom" and for the publishing of a political magazine Investigator.

In 1934 the British associate of Korostovetz went to Berlin and found out that it was hopeless to advance any money to Skoropadski. The German-made hetman of Ukraine had signed a new agreement with the Nazis who had come to power. As the British associate of Korostovetz had some financial difficulties with his creditors, a suit was brought before the London courts on October 8, 1935. It revealed some details on the Korostovetz-Skoropadski agreement to get British money in 1932.

AFTER THIS Skoropadski has definitely tied his fate to that of Hitler. Goering promised to get back for him the hetman's "bulava" (emblem of power). Different Ukrainian politicians and adventurers, among whom some were former Ukrainian Socialists and even Communists, joined Skoropadski, whose financial possibilities had greatly improved since Hitler's arrival to power.

Hitler's arrival to power opened, indeed, a new era in the German-Ukrainian adventure. The Nazis' aggressive foreign policy made the Ukrainian problem immediately more real. On the other hand the official German-Polish friendship made it necessary to camouflage German-Ukrainian cooperation. Maj. Jarosh was ordered in 1933 to transfer his Ukrainian office from the German war department in Berlin to Switzerland.

While Skoropadski and his followers were maintaining contacts mainly with the conservative elements of the Nazi Party, the O. U. N. leaders, Col. Eugene Konovaletz and Andrey Melnik, another former Austrian colonel, were closely cooperating with Nazi extremists and, with the Gestapo. To stress their common totalitarian ideology, they also visited Mussolini, who offered them the Ukranian blue and yellow flag.

The year 1938 appeared to the pro-Nazi Ukrainians in exile to be the year of the beginning of the realization of their hopes. Their organizations were getting extremely active. The Nazi officials, headed by Alfred Rosenberg, were not concealing any more their increasing interest in the Ukranian movement. Different Ukrainian offices, propaganda institutes, and Ukrainian broadcasts were officially sanctioned by the Nazis in Berlin and Vienna.

Hetman Skoropadski's son, Danilo, brought up in Berlin in the spirit of the closest German-Ukrainian cooperation, received funds for a propaganda trip to the United States and Canada, where reside over 1,000,000 Ukrainians (750,000 in the United States and 300,000 in Canada).

EUGENE KONOVALETZ, the O. U. N. leader, was constantly rushing across Europe on mysterious missions. On May 23, 1938, however, Konovaletz ended his adventurous existence. He was killed by a bomb explosion in Rotterdam. The bomb had been hidden in a parcel handed to him by a foreign agent, whom he came to meet in Holland. Four theories were advanced to explain Konovaletz's mysterious assassination: (1) He was killed by the Communists; (2) he was killed by the Poles; (3) he was killed by Ukrainian patriots who could not forgive for transforming a Ukrainian nationalistic organization into an affiliation of the Gestapo; (4) he was killed by the Gestapo, which wanted to get rid of an agent who knew too much.

Anyhow, Konovaletz's successor, Andre Melnik, pursued his policy of closest cooperation with the Gestapo.

Andrey Melnik was also called to play behind the scenes a prominent part in Hitler's most curious experience with Carpathian Ukraine. This experience, which lasted from November, 1938, to March, 1939, contains clear indications on Hitler's Ukrainian plans.

U. S. Salutes Argentina

Good Will Message

By Bertram D. Hulen

Copyright by New York Times

GOODWILL and hemispheric solidarity were emphasized by President Roosevelt in a message read on his behalf last night on radio programs of the Columbia Broadcasting System to Argentina on the occasion of Argentine Independence Day.

Pointing to the danger confronting the American Republics in "these critical times," Mr. Roosevelt said "it is especially heartening to participate in an eloquent expression of the unity of ideals which firmly binds the chain of free republics" of the Western Hemisphere.

"I am particularly glad," he said, "to have the opportunity to send the greetings of the people and Government of the United States of America to the people and government of the Republic of Argentina on this day commemorating the declaration of Argentine independence in 1816 which consolidated the ardent and persistent efforts of the people of that great country to win liberty for themselves and their children. This day, following within a few days as it does the Declaration of Independence of the United States of America, emphasizes the close relationship between the ideals and aspirations of the peoples of our two republics. The spiritual affinity between Argentina and the United States, to which the acting President of the Argentine nation, Dr. Ramon Castillo, alluded in his generous expressions only a few days ago on the Fourth of July, has grown ever stronger during the century and more since the seeds of that affinity were sown.

"THE GOVERNMENT of the United States is proud to participate actively in the celebration of this anniversary through the representation from its armed forces, which the Argentine government cordially invited to Buenos Aires for the occasion. This pride is more than justified in the commemoration of unwavering devotion to the principle of liberty and in the recognition of the firm determination of the free people of this hemisphere to maintain that principle for which their forefathers so valiantly fought. During these critical times, when the American republics are confronted with the active danger presented by the challenge abroad today to the Christian civilization which they cherish as a precious heritage, it is especially heartening to participate in an eloquent expression of the unity of ideals which firmly binds the chain of free republics of this hemisphere.

"In paying tribute to the memories of those brave patriots who brought the Argentine Republic into existence and to their successors, who built upon this achievement to make the great nation that is Argentina today, we may take courage and inspiration and the strength of conviction to preserve the liberty for which they were prepared to give the last full measure of devotion."

The State Department made public a telegram of greetings from President Roosevelt to Dr. Ramon Castillo, Acting President of Argentina:

The White House,
July 8, 1941.

His Excellency
Dr. Ramon Castillo,
Acting President of Argentina:

The anniversary of the declaration of Argentine independence has afforded me an opportunity, of which I am deeply appreciative, to send greetings on behalf of the people and Government of the United States to the people and government of your great country. This occasion, which commemorates a declaration so closely related to the one in this country which Your Excellency so generously remembered only a few days ago, again imposes the profound spiritual affinity of the peoples of Argentina and the United States in their unflagging efforts to gain and maintain lasting freedom.

I send Your Excellency the assurances of my highest regard.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, sent the following telegram to Dr. Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, minister of foreign affairs and worship of Argentina:

July 8, 1941.

His Excellency,
Dr. Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu,
Minister of Foreign Affairs and Worship of the Argentine Republic.

On the anniversary of the declaration of Argentine independence, I send most cordial greetings of the Government of the United States to the government of the great Argentine nation and best wishes for the welfare of the Argentine people. It is deeply heartening during this period of emergency to be vividly reminded by this celebration that the ideals and governing principles of the peoples of our two republics are firmly rooted in the same ground of liberty.

Please accept my best wishes for Your Excellency's personal well-being and happiness.

SUMNER WELLES,
Acting Secretary of State.

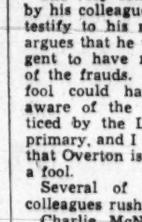
A Dissertation On The Senate

THE UNITED STATES Senate recently has given a shocking demonstration of its arrogant belief that it exists for itself rather than for the people and that the maintenance of a clubby politeness or noblesse oblige is more important than the preservation of freedom. The Senate is not a private and exclusive society but a very important public body, and the members are sent there to serve the people and not merely to flatter one another. The honor of the Senate is not wholly served by third-person address and parliamentary punctilio.



PEGLER

This refers to a recent debate, covering five pages of fine print in the Congressional Record, in which John H. Overton, of Louisiana, whose seat was obtained by an outrageously fraudulent primary in 1932, arose to defend himself by the use of such language as may be published only in the libel-proof columns of the Record. Far from denying the report of a special committee of the Senate finding that "a vicious and abhorrent political practice" had been resorted to by the historic band of rogues who stole the nomination for him, Senator Overton fell back on the defense that he personally did not participate in the frauds.

ALTHOUGH he is acknowledged by a number of colleagues to be a shrewd politician and a highly intelligent man, he nevertheless insisted that he had no guilty knowledge of the terrorism, extortion and other crookedness employed to his benefit.

The very compliment paid him by his colleagues in their rush to testify to his remarkable ability argues that he was far too intelligent to have remained ignorant of the frauds. Only an innocent fool could have remained unaware of the crookedness practiced by the Long gang in that primary, and I will never contend that Overton is either innocent or a fool.

Several of Senator Overton's colleagues rushed to comfort him.

Charlie McNary gave him an "exemplary character," but tipped his mitt as to his concept of the duty of Senators when he said that none of his colleagues had been "more zealous of the rights of the Senators with whom he has served."

WALTER GEORGE, of Georgia, who, as chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, investigated the corruption, recalled that, in the end the committee found nothing affecting the "high character and fitness" of Overton, although, again, it must be recalled that the special committee did find fraud. George even included Senator Allen J. Ellender, also of Louisiana, and an aggressive participant in all the political atrocities of the Long dictatorship, in his glittering indorsement of Overton.

Senator Elbert Thomas, of Utah, who served on the special committee and signed the report of fraud, having heard Overton's chaste discussion of "garbage," "filth" and "chronic putrefaction," warned the American press not to overstep the bounds of propriety, and added his testimony to the character of both Overton and Ellender.

SENATOR CLARK, of Missouri, who has a special interest in Louisiana politics too subtle for explanation in a passing reference, assisted in the praiseful ceremonies. And Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, the chairman of the special committee which resoundingly condemned the fraud but vindicated the beneficiary, also indorsed both Louisiana statesmen.

But Senator Connally also said: "There was no testimony, not even a hint, that Senator Overton personally had participated in any fraud or in any political chicanery or wrongdoing of any character whatsoever."

That statement is untrue, for on pages six and seven of the Connally committee's report to the Senate it is solemnly charged that the device of the dummy candidate, denounced by the committee as "vicious" and "abhorrent," was employed "with the knowledge, consent and approval of the candidate, Mr. Overton."

Certainly "knowledge, consent and approval" would, in my opinion, constitute "participation" in the fraud which Senator Connally found, but even if Overton be held to be an utter imbecile, and thus ignorant of the practices, he still had no right to a seat obtained by a fraudulent election. And it is admitted that he was the beneficiary of the fraud.

ALL THIS arose from a proposal that the statue of Huey Long should be removed from the Senate, where it mocks the citizenship of the people, the freedom of the ballot from which all other freedoms flow and the honor and courage of the Senate itself.

OPM Grants Priority Aid To Brazil for New Steel Mill

By the Associated Press

The State Department announced last night that the Office of Production Management had given priority aid for the construction of a $45,000,000 steel mill in Brazil. The decision to aid Brazil through priorities, the State Department said, follows this Government's policy of assisting other American republics to obtain essential materials here as far as compatible with national defense requirements.

The National Steel Co. of Brazil has already started groundbreaking operations. Priority aid permitting the company to obtain steel, machinery and other equipment promptly is designed to make possible completion of the mill within 2½ to 3 years.

Of the total cost of $45,000,000, the sum of $20,000,000 is being supplied by the Export-Import Bank and the remainder by the Brazilian government and financial institutions. The $20,000,000 loaned by the United States will be spent here.

Contracts and orders involved will be given priority ratings high enough to secure adequate deliveries without delaying deliveries on national defense contracts.

The State Department said the deal had been arranged in negotiations between Oswaldo Aranha, the Brazilian foreign minister, and American officials.

The steel mill will be of major importance to Brazil, the announcement said, since it will provide for utilization of some of Brazil's vast natural resources and will assist in improving the general standard of living of the country. The United States is expected to benefit through the increase in the market for United States products.

Output of the mill will assist in relieving pressure on American industries by providing material for Brazil's rearmament program a part of the general plan to bulwark defenses of the Western Hemisphere.

2 Invasions of Russia Met Disaster at Fateful Berezina

Reports of repeated German pushes to cross the Berezina River in the face of Russian counterattacks, a feature of the Nazis' on-to-Moscow drive, recall that two earlier invasions of Russia encountered defeat in the Berezina region.

"Napoleon met a Russian Waterloo on the marshy banks of the Berezina in 1812," points out a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "In the same expanse of river-soaked White Russian plains a century before, Charles XII of Sweden had blunted the spearhead of his drive on Moscow.

"The Berezina winds through flat, unspectacular pasture lands and woods on its 350-mile course to empty into the Dnepr River. In most places it is not wide enough for a 100-yard swimming dash, and in its upper course the width is less than 100 feet. But in decisive effect the obscure stream has a kinship with the famous Rubicon that decided Julius Caesar's fate.

"With generally north-south trend through the middle of the White Russian Republic of the U. S. S. R., the river must be crossed by any route to Moscow through Minsk or Vilna. Swamps a quarter-mile wide bordering it on each shore have made it a major hurdle for land forces to cross, especially in the days before pedestrian obstacles could be escaped by air-borne troops.

"The Minsk-Moscow section of Europe's northern cross-continental railroad goes over the river at Borisov. The other main town in its valley is Bobruisk.

"The three fatal days Napoleon spent getting his forces across the Berezina saw the destruction of his army November 26-29, 1812. His retreat from Moscow brought him to its banks near Borisov. Russian troops closing in on him from north, south, and east turned his retreat into a race. He rushed north of Borisov because there the Russians held both sides of the river. Two miles north, by wading and swimming around the floating ice, the French succeeded in throwing across two wooden pontoon bridges. When half of Napoleon's troops had crossed, the wily Russians began a surprise attack on the divided army from both sides. More French troops than the bridges could accommodate forced their way onto the structures, pushing many soldiers into the water. The confusion was heightened by plunderers trying to save their wagonloads of booty from conquered Russian cities.

"The army finally burned its own bridges, abandoning 5,000 troops to the Russians. The following spring, when the ice in the frozen Berezina thawed, the Russians claimed they counted 20,000 French dead in the river. Napoleon's total losses from the Berezina crossing were placed as high as 30,000. Immediately after that catastrophe, he turned over the remnants of the army to a subordinate and fled to France.

"On an earlier invasion of Russia (1708), Sweden's King Charles XII succeeded in crossing the river with no such disaster, but the scarcity of supplies in the country beyond it convinced him that he could not carry out his plan to capture Moscow. From east of the Berezina, therefore, he turned his army southward in hope of conquering the Ukraine, and met such defeat that he had to take refuge in Turkey for five years before making his way back to Sweden by a roundabout route."

Now, Uncle Seeks Living Room for Dogs

One of the greatest arguments in dogdom must be terminated without a conclusive answer because Uncle Sam is putting his money behind national defense instead of dogs these days.

Dr. W. N. Dawson, director of the experimental canine breeding project at the Agriculture Department experimental farm in Beltsville, Md., discussed his vanishing hopes yesterday—vanishing because Congress turned down the appropriation for the work.

He was preparing to break ties with some 200 border collies, chows, Turkish sheep dogs and pulis, and it wasn't easy.

"You get attached to dogs you know," he said, "and you hate to be parted from them. Some of them must be turned over to other Government departments for experimental purposes. But I hope I can find good homes for the rest without having to put them out of the way."

Igor Is a Puli

The experiments with 56 mature dogs of four basic breeds began in May, 1936.

The plan was to determine whether the traits of intelligence, faithfulness and kindliness are hereditary or whether environment plays the most important role.

Dr. Dawson stated that no startling conclusions could be drawn yet, because the experiment has not been pursued far enough.

"About the only thing we can make a definite statement on so far is that the female is more trusting than the male," said Dr. Dawson.

He said that two intelligent dogs mated almost invariably produce intelligent offspring. The effects of mating a trustful female and a mistrustful male, and vice versa, have not yet been worked out.

Since the experiment apparently must be discontinued, his greatest desire now it to find good homes for his dogs, he said.

How Those Ibises Do Carry On!

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

A notable "first" was chalked up at the zoo yesterday, only to be more or less eclipsed by the White-Scarlet-Blacked-Headed Ibis Case, or the mystery of Who Laid That There Egg?

When a pair of secretary birds arrive at National Zoological Park, that's news, whether they bite anyone or anyone bites them. This is because the zoo never had a pair of secretary birds, until yesterday.

Now the secretary bird has the face of a vulture, the legs of a stork and the body of a midget-sized ostrich. It feasts on snakes, comes from darkest Africa and has an orange-colored rim around its eyes.

It gets its name from the funny quill rising from the back of the head which looks for all the world like a wad of lead pencils stuck behind the ears.

With all that, the pair of freshmen secretaries by all odds should have been the center of attraction in the birdhouse after they were uncrated and placed on exhibition yesterday.

But no, those unconventional, publicity-loving ibises took the play away. Here's how:

A white ibis and his mate, a scarlet ibis, took turns feeding and protecting their adopted offspring, a 10-day-old black headed ibis. The nest is in an artificial tree in the large indoor flight cage which houses upwards of two dozen species of birds, large and small.

The case of the mixed ibises had its beginning a few weeks ago when a black-headed ibis laid an egg on the cage floor and then completely ignored it. Malcolm Davis, the birdhouse keeper, realizing that it would soon be smashed if it were not removed, decided to experiment by placing the greenish little object in the nest of the miscegenated ibises.

They took to it immediately. Their own offspring, a curious looking hybrid, was almost full grown and weaned from family ties. Apparently the scarlet and her white mate felt the yearning anew for the footsteps of a tiny one around the nest.

Last week the egg hatched. Tiny one? By yesterday the fledgling already had grown so large that its foster father had difficulty covering him in the nest. That's because the black-headed ibis is a much larger species than either the scarlet or white.

The scarlet and white species of ibis, incidentally, are natives of America. The black-headed is European. Maybe there's a mystical omen or something, in the first two taking the Old World orphan under their wing.

BIG PROBLEM to its foster papa, a white ibis, is this 10-day-old black-headed ibis. The adopted fledgling already has grown so large that the white ibis has difficulty covering it in the nest Post Staff Photo—Ellis

By Bill Cunningham.

Bill Cunningham's Column: America Should Shake Loose Her Inferiority Complex

The summer sun has already burned so many freckles into the young man's face that he looks as if somebody had dunked him head first into a bushel basket full of wet confetti, and he heard me telling his daddy I couldn't see him Monday because I was going to Detroit for the All-Star baseball game.

"Gee!" he said, as if the word had syllables. I had obviously taken on a new and impressive significance. "Gosh!" and he practically exhaled the word. His eyes were shining like a pair of old-fashioned bridle ornaments. "Gee . . ." he said, in that punctured-tire motif again. It was obviously as if I had announced I were going to something approximating heaven.

I kept thinking about that kid all the way back to town, that young man of a dozen summers or so, representing, as he does, all we're trying to stand up for, to safeguard, to provide for. I could see him standing against the backdrop of the "long week end" just closing, a three-day celebration of the birth of the way of living that made both him and the baseball game possible, the creation of the idea that, if properly defended, will keep both of them where they are, and their futures what they should be.

Among Foreign Titles

They had a very swell affair at the place where I was. It was the social tops of all time because mixed in it was some of the rag-tag and bob-tail of European society that had been run out or shot loose from the places it used to occupy, bringing us its headaches to handle. Most of the summer colony hasn't had such a thrill since Joe first started making enough money so they could have a maid.

There were actually titles present. They looked more like mortgages if you examined them closely. There was a countess discoursing upon what a terrible thing it was to be on a ration of silk stockings and to have to do without perfumed soap in the bawth. A former consular power of a now vanished land was critical of the hotel accommodations in the village nearby. Always the romanticist, I looked hard for the tragedy written in indelible chapters on tired faces, and listened for personal prescriptions for saving the universe.

There weren't any.

They seemed more interested at the moment in learning from the clam-digger in the white coat, impressed to do a temporary job of butling, whether the brawndy they had ordered and he was serving with his thumb in it was Korvoyseeaye or some lesser breed of plain cooking likker. Maybe this came under the head of forgetting.

The band, of course, played "There'll Always Be an England," and I, for one, hope there always will be, and that contemporaneously, there'll never be another Germany, or any other power, whoever or whatever it is, that will, or can, plunge mankind into this type of murderous nightmare that has us all stopped at the moment, but I'm all through agreeing with the lushes around such saturnalias concerning what great people the British are.

Coat-Holding Gone Far Enough

Maybe they are great, and I still want 'em operating, but I'm sick of holding their coat and saluting their superiority in everything from leather goods to linguistic accents. I, for one, am convinced that they've run out of superiority. I furthermore don't think they ever had any, so far as this country is concerned.

Don't get me wrong. I haven't joined Col. Lindbergh. I think he ought to shut up and sit down. Neither am I anti-British. I want England to survive and the Axis to be completely and forever hamstrung.

But thinking in terms of that freckle-faced kid, who typifies—who is—the America of tomorrow, the one we're concerned about, my one prayer, as a seventh generation American, is that somehow, somewhere out of all this, America will find her own soul, and will quit borrowing one for company use.

Basically, we have the strongest, cleanest, finest nation the world has ever known. Its record is the only honest one extant. Its story is forthright from the first. The only trouble in it, or with it, is the trouble we've let seep into it from the outside. The scum, the rabble, the saboteurs of mind and material have come from the lesser breeds which we've been dumbly saluting through an inferiority complex resident mostly in the minds of our horse-lot society.

When in the name of common sense are we going to have ordinary intelligence enough to rally around our own flag instead of somebody else's faded and frequently dishonored banner, to stand upon our own feet, speak our own language, make our own terms and write our own ticket?

I'm for a new Declaration of Independence with the teeth of a crocodile in it, to be uttered double forte when this is all over. I'd even be a party to it now.

VACATION time is here and whether you travel near or far, your timepiece is your best friend. It must be handled with care, however, as jewelry experts say that salt air or water is most injurious to a watch. They point out that women should be especially careful not to wear their wrist watches in swimming nor even to get them damp.

The fact that a watch is a valuable piece of jewelry is another reason for being cautious about the care of it is given. There is a preference for diamond watches even by the girl in the office. The yen for diamonds, to be worn less conspicuously than in a bracelet has given impetus to the demand for watches. A woman can satisfy her craving for luxury in an inconspicuous way and still have something practical in the timepiece.

Looks Not Everything

But a timepiece should not be chosen just because it is ornamental, but rather because it is of a reliable make and will give good service. The theory that a woman's watch is perishable and will not keep good time because it is so small, is false. Watches will keep just as good time today or better as they did when they were the size of a silver dollar, say jewelers. This is because of their smaller, more accurate movements.

The small wrist watch does carry with it the necessity of care in its selection, however. A woman with a large wrist should select the slender baguette shape. The woman with the small wrist should select the square dial shape watch. Neither should wear filigree but should select rather simple watches.

New Shapes

In addition to square and baguette shapes, there is the new oval dial shape, as well as the round style. Yellow gold is most common for the cases, but white gold is coming into prominence in watches to match other jewelry. Gold cases with a pinkish bronze cast are also being shown. In the square model, there is one style with a new raised crystal that gives beauty and strength to the watch case.

In discussing the care of watches, a jeweler pointed out that, unless force is used, it is almost impossible to wind a watch too tightly. He said that the trouble with many watches, when in need of repair, is insufficient winding. From 25 to 30 complete revolutions are not too many turns for most watches. He also cautioned that a watch should be cleaned at least once a year. Not because it gets dirty, but because the small amount of oil soon vanishes.

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to give your hair oil treatments before regular shampoos. This is so necessary during the summer when sun and salt water remove the natural oil from your tresses. Results of this extra care will be delightfully apparent

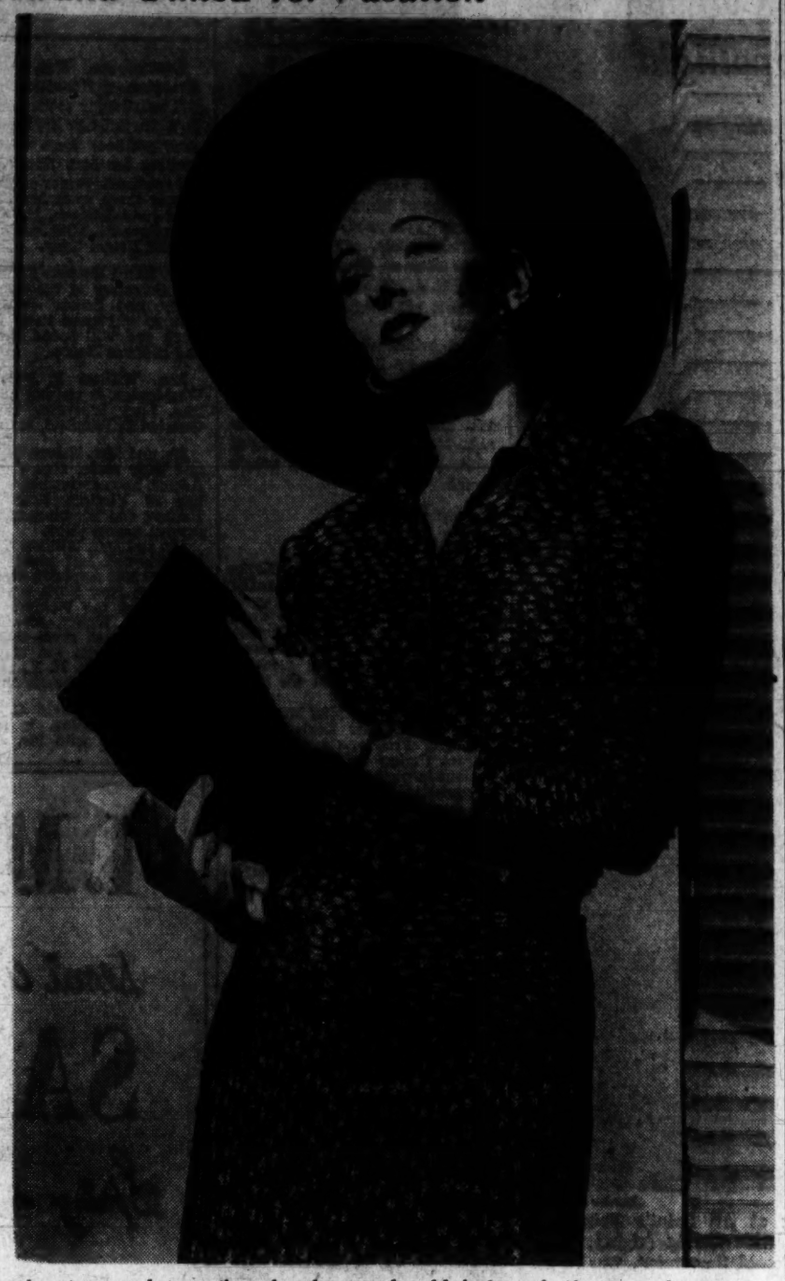
Primed and 'Timed' for Vacation



A diamond wrist watch is preferred today to the old-fashioned filagree styles of yesterday. The one above is a 17-jewel precision Gruen watch in 14-karat pink gold set with 14 diamonds. It is chosen to complement the Louise Barnes Gallagher powder puff print sheer in sage green. The gown has slightly leg o' mutton sleeves in the new three-quarter length. The hat, by Jeanne Tete, is a baku skimmer with grosgrain band. An ideal vacation outfit.

When in Doubt Use a Screen; It's a Panacea

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WHEN IN A DECORATIVE doubt, consider a screen. It will bridge gaps, hide necessary evils, add design interest where needed. In fact, it is a panacea for many, if not all, of the ills to which a room is heir.

Mrs. J. K. has a problem that we think a screen can solve. Her dining room is the only place in the house where she can keep her sewing paraphernalia, which includes a portable machine that she uses on the dining table, a dress form and a little wallpapered closet chest of drawers. There is no room for these in the closets or the rest of the house, and if there were, it would be inconvenient to keep this stuff anywhere else, since she works in the dining room. How can she arrange so that the dining room is dignified-looking and not cluttered when she's not working? After all, what chance has a smart decorating scheme with a dress form ogling and haunting the scene! She'd thought of a screen, of course, but can't decide on what kind, as the room has ivy-patterned wallpaper in white and green, Venetian blinds with white pique side curtains, a green rug. She feels that a wallpapered screen would seem too "busy" but doesn't know what else to select.

Our suggestion would be a white shutter screen — perhaps with brackets for ivy and maybe even with a small table to stand in front of the screen for flowers. This sort of a screen would maintain the spirit of the room, yet provide plenty of coverage for the sewing equipment behind it.

To Hang on to Your Teeth Get Sunshine and Vitamins

By Ida Jean Kain

THE PERCENTAGE of rejections due to bad teeth is four times as great among those called for Selective Service as it was during the World War. And since the dentists assure us that the examinatons then were just as rigid as they are now, the conclusion is that our teeth are not as good as they used to be, for what is true for our boys holds true for the rest of us.

You would probably like to hold on to your second set of dentures, but I doubt whether you are doing very much toward insuring this happy state of affairs. You could do quite a lot. You could see that your diet is all that it should be—take more of your calories in the protective foods—and make a habit of getting enough fresh air and sun.

It may strike you as a remote possibility that the sun has anything to do with your keeping your teeth, but here is the tie-up. As you know, you need calcium for your teeth, but what you probably do not realize is that you also need vitamin D to utilize the calcium.

Sun Gives Vitamin

You get this vitamin from the sun. That is the reason it is important to store up vitamin D from the summer sun and to reinforce your winter diet with cod liver oil concentrates. If you doubt this, just look into the statistics on the countries where the days of sun are comparatively few. The people of these countries invariably have poor teeth.

But you cannot depend upon any single factor. Your diet must be well-rounded. Vitamins C and A are very important. Remember when they used to call the British sailors "limies"? It was found that when the sailors failed to get enough fresh fruits and other fresh foods, their teeth loosened and their gums became red and swollen, so they kere given fresh limes to prevent these symptoms of scurvy. Of course, you're in no danger of scurvey, but at the same time you may not be getting enough Vitamin C to provide a healthy condition of teeth and gums. On the average, the adult needs 1,500 international units of C daily. This amount can be supplied i na small glass of orange juice or grapefruit juice, or a larger glass of tomato juice, together with a second fresh fruit juice and a fresh salad daily.

Vitamin Saves Enamel

Vitamin A is necessary to the protection of the enamel. It is furnished in whole milk, cheese, butter, egs and green and yellow vegetables. The overweight who takes skim milk in place of whole milk must be careful to include daily a serving of uncooked greens such as escarole or watercress, and a serving of cooked greens, such as spinach or beet greens. Otherwise, the diet should be supplemented with a haliver oil capsule which contains Vitamin A without calories.

Adults need 0.8 grams of calcium daily. This is supplied in a pint of whole milk or buttermilk, plus the small amounts in vegetables and other foods. It is practically impossible to get enough calcium without milk or cheese in the daily menus.

If you follow an adequate diet and visit your dentist regularly, you should be ble to hang on to your teeth much longer than the average.

Girl Asks Explanation of Man's Conduct in Never Calling Her After One Date, Yet 'Rushing' Her At Dances and Saying He Is 'Afraid' of Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a junior in college, supposedly attractive and really quite popular with my own crowd. Six months ago, I met a very fine boy who is studying to be a lawyer. I had only one date with him, which certainly indicates that I must not have appealed to him. If I had, he certainly would have asked me for other dates.

However, on two successive weeks, I went to fraternity dances, where he was among the guests. The moment I entered the room he would leave his group and come directly to me for a chat—behaving in a very friendly manner. At both parties I was very popular and he shared a number of the "cuts."

Then, last night, I met him at another dance where he again gave me a rush. As one of our dances was ending he informed me that he is "afraid" of me, and that since his chosen profession requires hard preliminary study, he thinks it best not to "date" me. Today I met him in class and he acted cool and distant. What do you make of this? Does he care for me? If so, why doesn't he date me? He brings other girls to the fraternity dances; so why should he act cool toward me? And should I be cool or friendly toward him? A. Z. D.

Man Is Struggling To Keep His Head

DEAR A. Z. D.: I believe the young man was telling the simple truth of his feeling, in saying that he is "afraid" of you. By this, he meant that he recognizes not only your potential power to engage his whole time and thought, but also the necessity to resist your magnetism—if he is to keep his faculties free to make headway in his chosen profession.

Very likely he floated home in something of a daze after that first and only date with you, saying, in effect: "What a girl! WHAT a girl!" And then, as his imagination started spinning lovely, romantic phantasies about you, he got a grip on himself, by thinking: "See here, my good man, this will never do. You've got a sheepskin to earn. You can't go overboard for a girl; not any girl; not even the most wonderful girl in the world. Hold your horses. Pull in your neck. STAY AWAY FROM THAT WOMAN!" And he has been doing his best to hold to that course of action ever since.

However, since he is young and healthy and normally human, and on the verge of falling in love, it is understandable that his grimly sensible, forward-looking resolutions would temporarily melt like ice at 90 degrees, when he beholds you at parties, surrounded by other beaux, looking your prettiest, employing all your come-hither; and where the whole atmosphere and everybody's conduct is keyed to the sentiment of enjoying this hour and forgetting the morrow and Dull Duty. So he flies to your side as a needle to the magnet; and once there, rallies and tries to be nonchalant.

As for why he finally broke down and partially declared himself—by admitting that he is "afraid" of you and "thinks it best not to date you"—it may have been because he simply couldn't refrain from some acknowledgement of deep feeling. Or maybe he sensed your co-equal yen for him and felt the moment had come to read a momentary serious recognition of the true, subjective situation into the record of your mutually defensive exchange. In a sense, he must have been apologizing both to himself and to you for behaving "lightly" or indifferently, in the face of a serious challenge to his deepest feelings.

His classrom show of cool disinterest, the day following this "keynote" statement, may have been due (1) to embarrassment; (2) to a feeling that you two are linked by a bond of secret understanding that doesn't necessarily require effusive public expression; or (3) to a renewed determination to "hang on to himself," and resist to the last ditch his natural impulse to forget everything and everybody but you.

If he feels that way about you, why does he date other girls and not you? Because other girls don't matter. They're shadows on the wall; out of his mind when they're out of his sight. Because he can take 'em or leave 'em. They are just a part of the evening's outing—and one does as well as another, in the role of personable companion on a date.

How should you act toward him? However it pleases you to act—now that you know his secret. With warm friendliness, despite his stand-offishness, if such is your choice. Or with a matching show of indifference, if that attitude gives most comfortable support to your pride. But remember: (1) if he is sufficiently strong willed to keep his resolve, you don't want to humiliate yourself by making a futile play for him; and (2) if your appeal does have a chance of overcoming his "fear," it will register with equal effectiveness whether expressed in casual friendliness or casual indifference.

Feeling Blue? Get New Coiffure. Rather Than Hat

Hollywood, Calif.—We hear the fashion advice, "Go out and buy a new hat and you'll feel better," aimed at the girl who is feeling dull and mousy. But in the opinion of Perc Westmore, make-up director, a new coiffure can work ten times the wonders of a new chapeau. It has been known to change completely the face of things—as well as the lady's face.

Just to pass on a bit of valuable information, short hair is coming back in style in Hollywood. But he doesn't advise it except for the girl who contemplates an outdoor vacation on which she doesn't want to be bothered with complicated beauty rites. Anyway, it is unnecessary actually to cut the hair since it may be kept at a more workable length and curled to appear short.

This is a trick of Betty Field's. Betty's hair is shoulder length, the one preferred by most of the screen players. But occasionally she turns it up in three neat layers of curls which are combed out very easily. She'll wear this arrangement in "New Orleans Blues." But for wear with her evening gowns, which are usually of the period, full-skirted type, Betty likes a more classic arrangement, upswept into deep waves and curls.

To look important and feel different, try planning a hair-do to fit the type of dress you are wearing. Mary Astor has three at her command. A tailored one with suits, a fluffy one with simple sports dresses, a queenly one for evening. And this won't necessitate a personal coiffure artist to trail you with comb and brush. Simple arrangements may still be unique. And now that artificial hair is back in vogue, the most ornate coiffure is possible with a few turns of the wrist and some sturdy hairpins.

How to Look 11 Years Younger

THERE'S NOTHING mysterious about the secret of youth, Gelett Burgess claims in his fascinating book "Look Eleven Years Younger." Youthfulness is like a plant. Take care of it and it will bloom through the winter of life. Neglect it—the plant may fade even in spring!

Still, too many of us actually encourage age symptoms! We indulge in habits like the "neckpull" and "push-up," we slouch around like so much melting ice cream. Such aimless habits not only make us seem older, they deform our faces and figures.

Why do we do such things? It may be, as Gelett Burgess says, that our minds aren't on what we're doing, we "don't care." We let ourselves slide down the path to old age. But, by becoming conscious of our actions, by cultivating the positive alertness of youth we could stay "youthful" all our lives.

You may feel a wee bit uncomfortable when you submit to a Gelett Burgess once-over! "Goodness is that me he's talking about?" Are you a "mumble-boy" or a "drawlster" when you speak? Do you have such elderly tricks as talking about ages?

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Look 11 Years Younger," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Home-Cooling Hints

A home cooling unit has now been developed that is supposed to do the trick quietly, gently, comfortably. The heated air is swept out through the attic as the fresh air comes in through the first floor windows. Eliminating the usual hot blanket of oppressive air in the attic will alone bring down the temperature of the whole house many degrees. This new home cooling unit is said to change the air of the house completely once every minute.

Diplomatic Assignment in Peru Thwarts Patterson Holiday Plans

First Secretary Left Berlin Embassy Hoping for Quiet Summer at Home

By Hope Ridings Miller

A quiet holiday in America, followed by a return to Berlin at the end of summer was what Jefferson Patterson expected when he packed his bags in April and, with Mrs. Patterson, started homeward. Heir to part of the National Cash Register fortune, Mr. Patterson has been First Secretary of the United States Embassy in the German capital for some time and was serving in that capacity when he married Mary Marvin Breckinridge a year ago in Berlin.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

But since nothing today is more uncertain than a diplomat's plans, it's quite in keeping with the maelstrom of emergency mutability that Mr. Patterson is packing his bags once more—but not to return to the Berlin post. Instead, he'll leave Washington tomorrow and will sail this week end for Lima, Peru, to serve as First Secretary, replacing Joseph F. McGurk.

Mr. Patterson's new title is the same as the other one, but he has moved up quite a diplomatic notch by taking the new job. Our embassy at Berlin has three First Secretaries. The one at Lima has only one, and the First Secretary there also serves as Counselor and is, therefore, second in rank only to the Ambassador.

News of Mr. Patterson's forthcoming departure for the South American post is just now getting around in Washington, but colonists at York Harbor, Me., learned all about it the past week end at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. John Cabell Breckinridge, Mrs. Patterson's parents. More than 300 guests turned out for the terrace fete at River House, the Breckinridge summer place overlooking the river. Washingtonians there included Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Legare, Walcott Waggamann, Mrs. Charles Bromwell and her daughter, Lady Bailey, Miss Catherine Poe and Mrs. Churchill Candee, all of whom are summering at York Village.

The week-end marked Mr. and Mrs. Patterson's first visit to the Maine resort since they were married. Accompanying the couple back to Washington on Monday were Mrs. Patterson's brothers, Robert Breckinridge and Charles Breckinridge and the latter's wife, who have taken a house in Spring Valley for the month of July. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson, meanwhile, have been staying at the Carlton Hotel.

What about Bastille Day this year? Will there be any celebration in Washington this Quartorze Juillet (July 14), to mark the fall of the Bastille and the birth of the French Republic? This question, asked on all sides recently, can now be answered: for the French Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, announces that he will receive members of the French Colony at the Embassy, 2221 Kalorama Road, at 12 o'clock on July 14.

At 10 a. m. on the same day, the Ambassador and members of the French Colony will attend a religious service at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, to honor the French victims in the war.

"Go West, young woman," seems to have been a widely circulated suggestion a few weeks ago when Washington girls were making their summer plans. Every time I turn around I find out that another set of sweet young things are en route to the wide open spaces. Now motoring to a ranch in Wyoming is pretty Betty Drayton, post-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeVere Drayton. With her are a number of classmates from Smith College. From Wyoming the party will go on to Banff and Lake Louise, and then return to the States and go to the "C Lazy Z" ranch in Montana for the remainder of the season.

Earlier in the summer, Miss Drayton and her younger sister, Dorothea, attended the famous religious conference in Northfield, Mass. Dorothea then went on to a camp near Wilton, Me., where she will be until September. Incidentally, her name has been added to the list of debutantes for 1941, and plans are being made for her bow in the winter.

Party Honors The Hammonds

Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Reynolds, jr., entertained at an informal cocktail party yesterday afternoon in their home on Capitol Hill, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wendell Hammonds.

The hostess received her guests in a simple yellow sports dress, with the able assistance of Senator Raynolds, of North Carolina, her father-in-law. During the afternoon she introduced about 40 guests to the former Miss Ellen Floweree and Mr. Hammonds.

Betty Bliss Gathers Group for Buffet Supper at Home

Miss Betty Bliss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Goring Bliss, entertained informally at a buffet supper last evening at her home on Reno Road.

Enjoying the supper and dancing afterward were several midshipmen and cadets now on summer leave. Among those present were Miss Patty Wattles and Miss Felicia Johnson, of Annapolis; Miss Marian Ross, Miss Betty Sutton, Miss Mary Frances Peck, Arthur Rounds, Joseph Wells, Frank Healy and Midshipmen Douglas Plate, Clive Strangman, Marcy Dupre and David Green.

Argentinians Here Mark Independence

In celebration of the 125th anniversary of Argentine independence, the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil were hosts at a reception yesterday from 6 to 7:30. Guests were Argentinians living in Washington.

The holiday is being celebrated all week in Argentina with an unprecedented display of military might.

Mrs. Shouse Will Entertain Quartet

Mrs. Jouett Shouse, whose devotion to chamber music is well known, will entertain tonight for members of the Primrose Quartet, which is led by the distinguished Britisher, William Primrose. The party will take place at the Shouse country home, Wolf Trap Farm.

The artists played on Tuesday at the first open chamber music concert held in the United States, which took place at Meridian Park. Later that evening Mrs. John Matthew Whittall, a member of the sponsoring committee, gave a party for the quartet.

Mrs. Cabot Joins Husband Today

Mrs. Paul Cabot will arrive from Boston today to join Mr. Cabot, a member of the American Foreign Service who has been assigned to duty at the State Department. They recently returned to this country from Guatemala, where Mr. Cabot was on the staff at the American Legation.

Joseph J. Campbells Mark 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Jospeh J. Campbell, of Greenwich Forest, entertained a group of friends at the Shoreham earlier this week. The festivities celebrated their silver wedding annniversary.

Two Wedding Ceremonies Take the Spotlight

Underwood & Underwood — Hessler Studio

Mrs. Philip Leaman Schwartz (left), was married last evening at All Saint's Episcopal Church. She was the former Miss Lynne Wear. Mrs. Joseph Patrick Carrig (right), who before her marriage yesterday morning at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, was Miss Margaret Louise Viehmann

Schwartz-Wear Nuptials Held

In a setting of lilies, white gladioli and fern, Miss Lynne Wear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ellis Wear, of San Francisco, Calif., became the bride of Philip Leaman Schwartz, son of Philip J. Schwartz, of this city, at All Saints' Episcopal Church last evening, The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a full-skirted gown of white chantilly lace made with long sleeves and a square neckline. Her full-length tulle veil fell from a lace coronet and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias, white roses and bouvardia.

Miss Patricia Sawtell, the maid of honor, came from San Francisco for the wedding. She was dressed in yellow chiffon and lace and carried a green-beribboned bouquet of yellow marguerites. The bridesmaids, Miss Alida Betty Haller, of Frederick, Md.; Miss Olive Simmons, of Cleveland, Ohio; Miss Barbara Mary Backrath, of Florida, and Mrs. Edward Gibson, wore green chiffon dresses and carried yellow markuerites tied with matching ribbon. Green veils fell from their Juliet caps.

Dr. Richard Buckingham was best man and the ushers were Conrad Wyvell, Robert McFarland and George McCalla, of Philadelphia, Pa., and John Hamilton, of Washington.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Judge and Mrs. Charles Monroe Trammell, of Chevy Chase. When the couple left on their wedding trip, the bride was dressed in a red-jacketed white crepe frock with which she wore black and white accessories and a black picture hat. After a honeymoon, they will make their home a 120 Columbia Avenue, Hyattsville, Md.

The E. C. Walkers Establish Home In Fairfax Village

Mr. and Mrs. E. Cole Walker have returned from their wedding trip and are making their home at the Fairfax Village Apartments. They were married at Grace Baptist Church on June 14, with the Rev. F. W. Johnson officiating at the 4 o'clock ceremony.

Mrs. Walker is the former Miss Mildred May Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon S. Myers, of Washington. Mr. Walker's parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Walker.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a frock of white chiffon with insertions of lace in the yoke and bishop sleeves. Her veil fell from a bonnet tiara and she carried a white Bible with white orchids and a shower bouquet of babies' breath.

Miss Audrey Carolyn Myers, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore pastel green chiffon and carried a bouquet of roses and babies' breath. Mrs. Virginia Watson Tyler, the matron of honor, was gowned in pastel yellow chiffon, and she carried roses and fern. John Tyler, of Wichita, Kans., was best man, and Morgan B. Harvey and J. Hall Simpson were ushers.

Louise Alexander On Way to Long Island

Miss Louise Alexander is in New York today to meet her sister, Miss Sylvia Alexander, who has been visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Alexander, at their home in Grosse Point, Mich.

The two sisters will go on to their summer home at Easthampton, Long Island, where they will join their father, Edward Alexander, and their brothers, Edward, jr., and James Hoban Alexander.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

OF MUCH INTEREST to the many friends of Kenneth Bewley, former Financial Counselor of the British Embassy here, is the news that he has returned to Washington. He arrived by clipper recently to work for the British Purchasing Commission and is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown at their home on Thirty-second Street.

Mrs. Bewley remained in England to be near her sons. The oldest, Michael, is serving in the Army. His mother is staying in Surrey for the duration.

MRS. STANLEY-BROWN will leave the end of next week for Nantucket, where she has one of the interesting old houses. She says she has a slight guilt complex about taking a vacation this summer, with all the work there is to be done, but her friends are telling her maybe nobody will have any vacations next year and that she might just as well gather her rosebuds while she may.

For the last few weeks, Mrs. Stanley-Brown has been hard at work with the committee which has arranged the outdoor chamber music concerts at Meridian Park. The opening night, Tuesday, drew throngs to the beautiful Italian-style gardens. Especially admired were the fountains, which have been illuminated this year for the concerts.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse entertained at a dinner at Wolf Trap Farm before the concert. Others in the audience included Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Draper and Clarence Hewes. Mrs. Shouse will leave shortly for a vacation—whether to New England or the Northwest she hasn't yet decided.

Other Vacation Notes—Among those at Edgartown, on picturesque Martha's Vineyard, are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Macatee. Mr. Macatee has been serving as consul in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

NEW YORK NOTES—Ginghams and cottons may be ideal for Washington weather, but when you stroll down Fifth Avenue you realize how really un-chic they are for the city. The average New Yorker has it all over Washington women in clothes. Particularly effective was an ensemble all of one solid color—navy blue tailored dress, shoes, a little Dutch cap of the same material, and even an umbrellla of this shade. Another passerby looked exceeding smart in a perfectly fitted gray tailored suit and a little red knitted skull cap.

IF ALL THE young men who have joined the armed forces were as well taken care of as the new "emergency ensigns," the United Service Organizations wouldn't have a thing to worry about. Fifty of them who received ensign's titles in three months after studying on the S. S. Prairie State in New York City are now assigned to further study at Darien, Conn. The residents have given them memberships in all the beach clubs and the boys get off at 4 every afternoon. (They must return in the evening at 7 to study until 9, for the books are all secret and cannot be taken out of the school.)

The only fly in the ointment is a housing shortage. One couple married a few weeks ago are having to spend their honeymoon in a trailer camp. Several bachelors who have taken a house there are well known in Washington—one is Bill Vietor, cousin of "Penguin" Jack Vietor, and the other is Beverley Bogert, jr., of Newport. When we saw them the other day they were feeling rather discouraged at housekeeping. They hired a woman who had just sent their bathing suits and their neckties to the laundry.

Lieut. Dorsett, Bride At Edgewood Post

Lieut. and Mrs. Francis Marshall Dorsett, whose wedding took place recently in Fort Bliss, El Paso, Tex., are now at Edgewood, Md., where Lieut. Dorsett is stationed temporarily in the Chemical Warfare School. They will return to Texas some time next month.

The bride is the former Miss Mildred Virginia Wilkinson, daughter of Mrs. John A. Wilkinson, of Washington, formerly of Pittsfield, Mass. Lieut. Dorsett is the son of Mrs. Lorette P. Dorsett, of Washington. The wedding took place in the Army Chapel of Fort Bliss on June 28.

Given in marriage by Capt. Lawrence Linderer, the bride wore a pale blue summer alpaca dressmaker suit with a matching straw fabric picture hat and navy accessories. Her corsage of rosebuds was interspersed with delphinium. Mrs. Lawrence Linderer, the matron of honor, wore a beige silk suit with a wide-brimmed hat and brown accessories.

Lieut. William F. Kesar was best man. Following the ceremony there was a reception in the continental room of the Hilton Hotel in El Paso. The couple also was feted at a dinner in the Officers' Mess at Fort Bliss.

Miss Viehmann Becomes Bride Of J. P. Carrig

The Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament was the scene yesterday morning of the wedding of Miss Margaret Louise Viehmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Joseph Viehmann, and Joseph Patrick Carrig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Carrig of Jersey City, N. J. The Rev. Charles D. Gorman officiated at the nuptial mass.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a long-trained gown of white dotted swiss under a fingertip net veil that fell from a floral coronet. Her shower bouquet was of white roses, orchids and baby's breath.

Sister Is Maid of Honor

The maid of honor, Miss Kathryn Marie Viehmann, who caught her sister's bridal bouquet, wore a full-skirted dress of blue marquisette, with a basque bodice and lace inserts in the sleeves. Her arm bouquet of assorted spring flowers matched the flowers in her coronet.

The bridesmaids, Miss Mary Estelle Wright, Miss Doris Batson and Miss Frances Gravey, wore dresses similar to the honor attendant in pink, yellow and green marquisette, respectively. They too wore floral wreaths and carried matching bouquets.

Thomas Carrig served his brother as best man and the ushers were Clement Trossevin, Joseph Vunsa and Peter Fachon.

To Make Home In Washington

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Chevy Chase. The bride's mother had chosen a street-length frock of powder blue silk with which she wore an orchid hat and an orchid corsage.

When the newlyweds left on their wedding trip to Spring Lake, N. J., the bride wore a luggage tan linen suit, a green and white silk jersey blouse and wheat accessories. They plan to return to Washington to make their home in about a week.

The bride is a graduate of the Academy of the Holy Cross and Dumbarton College and her husband was graduated from Catholic University.

Mrs. Macauley Here on Way To West Coast

Mrs. Edward Macauley, wife of Maritime Commissioner Capt. Macauley, has just returned from New York and is now making plans to leave next week for her home in San Mateo, Calif.

She is going out to close her house there and to make arrangements for her furniture to be sent East. She and her husband are now living in the Prospect Avenue home which was built by Capt. Macauley's grandfather. Of her three sons, Edward Macauley 3d is in Washington studying to take the autumn examinations for the United States Foreign Service; one is in newspaper work in San Francisco and the third is attending the University of California in Berkeley.

Mrs. Macauley will return to Washington the last week in August.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Senator and Mrs. Albert A. Chandler, of Kentucky, who are still vacationing at the Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., gave a dinner there on Tuesday evening for Mrs. Keen Johnson, wife of the Governor of Kentucky. Others there were her daughter, Miss Judy Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. John Brooker, Miss Judith Brooker, and Daniel Gray.

Dr. Raoul Herrera-Arango, Second Secretary of the Cuban Embassy, and Senora de Herrera-Arango will leave today for New York and will spend the week-end at Essex House.

Mrs. William F. Pearson, of Washington, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Lucy Wadhams Dodge, at Guestwick, Pittsfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson T. Hartson and their niece, Mrs. Carlton R. Adams, have arrived at the Cavalier in Virginia Beach. Mrs. Hartson and her niece will spend several weeks there.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Curtin, jr., returned last night to their home at 3624 Appleton Street after a stay in New York, where they stopped at the Waldorf Astoria. George H. Weller, Mrs. Curtin's brother, joined them there. Mr. and Mrs. Curtin are planning a trip to Syracuse, N. Y., and Lake Placid later in the summer.

Midshipman David G. Adams, of South Carolina, is spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. Miller C. Foster before returning to the United States Naval Academy.

Mrs. Laughlin Currie has gone to Nantucket for a vacation.

Miss Billie Byrd West, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. West, of Laurel, Md., is at the Admiral in Cape May, N. J.

Mrs. Louis Simon has closed her apartment at the Shoreham for the summer. After spending a week with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Merryle Rukeyser, of New York, she will go to Star Lake, N. Y., for an extended visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gassenheimer have left for the West Coast, where they will spend the summer in travel.

Dr. Shoup Weds Miss Highfield

Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Highfield announce the marriage of their daughter, Dorothy Astrid, to Dr. Homer Burlington Shoup, jr., of Kent, Conn., at Hillsdale, N. Y., on June 17.

Mrs. Shoup is a graduate of the Holton-Arms school. Dr. Shoup is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Homer Burlington Shoup, of Greentown, Ind. He was graduated from the School of Medicine of the University of Indiana.

Miss Duffy Calls For Program In Industrial Centers, Camps

By Lucia Giddens

Catholic Daughters of America were urged to take a leading part in the morale program for camps and defense industrial communities, in an address at their convention last night by Miss Agnes F. Duffy of South Orange, N. J.

Speaking at a session of the nineteenth biennial convention at the Mayflower Hotel, Miss Duffy said "in general the participation of the Catholic Daughters of America will be cooperation and expansion of activities already organized rather than in initiation of new projects."

She urged that service men, away from their homes and parish influence, be given a welcome to Catholic circles, to social functions, parish meetings and other activities.

"Perhaps an even greater problem is now created by the sudden and overwhelming increase in population in defense industrial communities," she pointed out.

Units of the Catholic Daughters might seek "suitable and sanitary housing facilities for newcomers and prevent exploitation," she suggested. Provision of transportation to church, and organization of recreational activities for young people were other suggestions which she made.

"There can not be morale without character, without religious convictions, without all the constructive forces which the church brings into play in the family and social life of the Nation," Miss Duffy said.

Miss Duffy, sister of Miss Mary C. Duffy, supreme regent of the organization, was a featured speaker in a study club demonstration on last night's program, in charge of Mrs. Lulu Splide, national study club chairman.

Speaking on "Catholic Daughters of America in National Defense," Miss Duffy urged an intensification of the organization's national program, including study clubs, the junior groups, the Convert League, and efforts to keep informed about legislation.

Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector, Catholic University of America, was invited to speak on last night's session on the "Commission on American Citizenship."

Among resolutions to be acted on later during the convention, one proposed yesterday, was for cooperation of the Catholic Daughters of America with the United Service Organizations "particularly by contributing to the maintenance of clubs" for service men.

Other proposed resolutions urged members to buy defense bonds and to contribute used aluminumware in the collection campaign.

Miss Margaret Buckley, of Chevy Chase, Md., State regent, was named chairman of the resolutions committee. Other chairmen for the convention include: Mrs. Ethel Hickey, Los Angeles, credentials; Mrs. Adele Hiltgen, Sheboygan, Wis., courtesy; Mrs. Anna M. Lucid, Syracuse, N. Y., "Good of the Order" committee; Mrs. Lenora Z. Meder, Chicago, laws; Mrs. Anna Ballard, Milton, Mass., rules; Mrs. Hester Bowsher, Phoenix, Ariz., programs; Miss Louise Oberst, Camden, N. J., blackboard.

Miss Mary McKeogh, national social welfare chairman, led a discussion of social welfare in national defense at yesterday afternoon's session. She pointed out that more than 900 units of the Catholic Daughters have been sponsoring social welfare programs.

Miss Caul to Attend Religious Parley

Miss Frances Caul, member of the Zonta Club, has gone to Sweet Briar, Va., to attend a religious conference this week, sponsored by the Provincial Commission on Religious Education.

Miss Caul went as a representative of the Church School of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, of which she is executive secretary. The meeting, the Advanced Conference of the Province of Washington, will extend to next Friday.

Clubs' Welfare Chairmen Confer

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Bertha Blake Jones (right), new chairman of the department of public welfare, District Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday at the Y. W. C. A. held the first meeting with members of her group. Included in the conference were Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan (center), vice chairman of the public health division, and Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins (left), president of the federation

U. S. Must Learn to Get More From Its Food, Zonta Told

Training of volunteer "nutrition aides" to promote better choice and preparation of foods in communities throughout the Nation was visualized as a likely development by Dr. Helen S. Mitchell, a key nutritionist in the defense program, in an address yesterday.

Dr. Mitchell, director of nutrition on the staff of the Coordinator of Health, Welfare and Related Defense Activities, told the Zonta Club at its luncheon that her office is hoping to cooperate with the Office of Civilian Defense, by furnishing nutrition information for use by volunteers organized in various communities.

Many homes and restaurants and Army camps, too, might well do a better job in conserving nutritive values in preparation of foods, Dr. Mitchell said.

Some of the men cooking for Army camps have had training courses too short to be adequate, she said.

Losses of food value often result, she pointed out, in long or repeated heating and from poor storage. "We need more education on these points," she added.

In the World War, food shortages created the problem of increased production, she pointed out. In the present emergency, the problem is more largely that of educating the Nation to better food habits.

However it is not easy to change people's food habits, she remarked, and quoted a writer who said that sometimes it is harder to change political and religious views.

Dr. Mitchell addressed the Zontians at their weekly luncheon at the Y. W. C. A.

International Club Plans Week-end Trip

Emili Espiritu, outings chairman of the Washington International Club, which centers at International Student House, is planning a weekend trip to Capon Lakes, West Virginia, for members of the club and their guests.

Among those who will leave by car, Saturday, to return Sunday, will be Mrs. Grace Lowry, Elizabeth Lowry, Luis Cagno, Luis Lysarralde and Vincent Singian.

Mrs. Rice Tells How Woman Can Help U. S.

Four ways in which women can help to make the Nation strong in the emergency were outlined by Mrs. Stuart Rice, of Washington, in an address prepared for delivery last night at the national convention banquet of Theta Upsilon Sorority in Asheville, N. C.

Mrs. Rice, wife of Dr. Rice, assistant director in charge of statistical standards, Bureau of the Budget, said:

"First of all, as women, mothers, wives, we need to think less upon our personal comforts and more upon the essentials of life."

Pointing out the hardihood of the pioneer women of America, she said: "We could get along with fewer gadgets to contribute to our comfort.

"Secondly, we can do much to improve the health, the attitudes, the spiritual and mental well being of our children. We cannot predict just when this world struggle will cease or who the ultimate victors will be, but this we do know for certain—the life in the postwar period will be hard, definitely harder than the life we have known heretofore.

"Those upon whom will fall the burden to bring order out of chaos, to build a new and decent life upon the rules of the old, now sit in our schoolrooms, play in our parks or in congested city streets, look to us for well balanced meals and adequate medical care."

She urged that women "wage a war against waste in our own homes and throughout the country," as the third point in her suggested program.

"There will be inaugurated on July 21 the much needed program for salvaging aluminum. We can all join in this. We are encouraged to can or dry fruits and vegetables this summer, thereby enabling our Government to send more foodstuffs ot England."

As the fourth point, she suggested "we can resolve to be more useful citizens of the community."

Legion Auxiliary To Discuss Part In Civil Defense

How the American Legion Auxiliary can promote civilian defense will be one of the major themes for discussion at the convention of the Department of the District of Columbia, August 8 and 9 at the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

Preceding the convention, a banquet will be held August 7 at the Mayflower Hotel, with Miss Helen Bintz as chairman. She will be assisted by Mrs. Edith Sadler, Mrs. Elizabeth Ketner, Mrs. Esther Watson, Mrs. Sylvia McLaughlin and Mrs. Edith Armstrong.

Election of delegates to the national convention, and discussion of proposed amendments to the department's constitution and by-laws will be included at the business sessions, along with reports on the auxiliary's numerous activities.

Map Shows Catholics' Role in U. S. History

A map depicting the role of Catholics in the exploration, development and defense of the United States, was presented by its originator, Miss Mary Belle Glennan, of Norfolk, Va., at the convention session of the Catholic Daughters of America last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

The executive committee of the organization in 1939 agreed to sponsor the map which has just been printed in time for display at the current convention. William W. Campbell, of Philadelphia, an architect whose hobby is historical maps, collaborated with Miss Glennan.

The map touches on American history from the time of Leif Ericson up to the War Between the States. Miss Glennan is a member of the Virginia Historical Society and the American Catholic Historical Society.

U.W.O. Leaders Meet to Fight Propaganda

Officers of the United Women's Organizations of the District held their first executive meeting yesterday to make plans for the fall series of "information programs to combat subversive propaganda."

Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the U. W. O. and of the Woman's National Democratic Club, said that 42 women's organizations have already signified interest in the movement. "Between 35 and 50 will take part in the fall meetings," she said.

The officers yesterday drafted a letter to be sent to the various women's organizations, in order to put them on record as to the extent of their participation in joint effort of women's groups to aid the defense program.

Other U. W. O. officers, attending the meeting yesterday, were Mrs. Edward E. Gann, vice president of the new group and president of the League of Republican Women; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, recording secretary; Mrs. Arthur Neuman, corresponding secretary.

The meeting was held at the Woman's National Democratic clubhouse.

Groups of Ohio Scouts Visits Little House

A group of 15 Girl Scouts from Springfield, Ohio, this week visited the Girl Scouts Little House at Eighteenth Street and New York Avenue Northwest, while they were staying at the scout camp at Rockwood, Md. They were the fifth such group welcomed to the Little House in the last two weeks, said Mrs. E. G. Bowman, hostess.

Just between us brewers —let's keep the record straight!

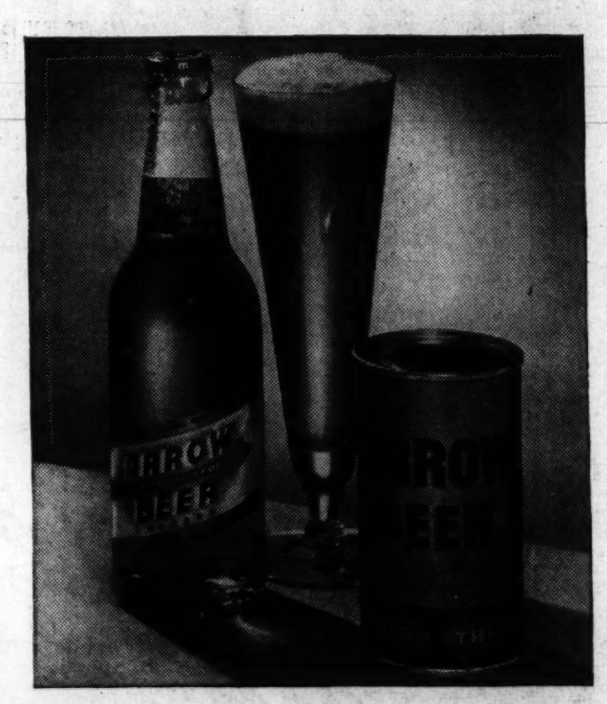
As Will Rogers once said—"All we know is what we read in the papers." And what we've been reading lately would lead us to believe (if we didn't know better) that you can buy a finer beer in these parts than Arrow. You sort of get the idea (from the papers, again) that it's possible to find better ingredients, use better equipment than we use to make up a bottle of Arrow Beer.

Just between us brewers — let's keep the record straight!

For years, we have been doing things down at the Globe Brewing Company that others are just beginning to brag about.

When better hops and better malt can be found — Arrow Beer will use them. The best we can buy will always go into Arrow Beer.



No one—regardless of price—makes a better beer than Arrow. Down at the brewery where Arrow is made, we all respect a fine beer. That's why we make one... and only one!

If we had to buy hops below the Arrow quality — we'd have to put them into a second-best beer. For our part, we're sticking to one quality — one standard — one beer!

We keep Arrow's quality up — by keeping unnecessary costs down. Arrow is an expensive beer to make—NOT an expensive package. Nothing goes into Arrow but quality ingredients; nothing comes out but that fine hearty Arrow flavor.

That Arrow flavor fits the average man's purse and the rich man's taste. And the record shows Arrow Beer gives a world of satisfaction and pleasure to both!

Money can't buy a finer beer than

Toledo, Ohio, July 9 (U.P.).—The Acklin Stamping Co. today eliminated a production bottleneck.

Police arested a fortune teller who had instructed women employes to be cautious between 2:30 and 3:30 p. m. daily because of the "danger of serious accidents."

Pursuit of Happiness!

New Orleans, July 9 (AP).—Two busy ferryboats here had to make detours around a man swimming in the Mississippi River, so the irate captains complained. Taken ashore by police who asked him why he swam in the ferry lanes, the man replied happily, "I don't know except that it's a nice place to swim."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Opposition Faces Move To Lengthen All Hours

Selective Service has placed its employes on a 44-hour work week, five hours more than the usual Government work week. War Department also has its employes on a 44-hour week and the Civil Service Commission has extended the hours of certain of its employes. Most other defense agencies are working longer hours than required and there has been reports that all Federal employes would be required to put in longer hours for the duration. Any blanket order would be met with stiff opposition from old-line Federal employes who know it would be years before Government workers would be given a 39-hour week.

Senator Mead expects to get up the uniform promotion plan in the Senate today and he has high hopes of its approval. The bill is on the calendar and one objection can kill it. However, the bill passed the House unanimously and similar Senate action is hoped for. Not one single Federal employe, no matter how efficient, can be given an administrative raise until the bill passes. The bill treats all employes alike on promotions and its passage today would be a great improvement in the Federal service.

The executive committee of UFWA's local 12 waited in the hall yesterday for several hours trying to see Labor Secretary Frances Perkins. The C. I. O. union has taken up the fight for Helen Miller, Labor Department employe, who was suspended by the Secretary on left-wing charges. Mrs. Miller signed the affidavit that she wasn't a member of an organization that advocated overthrow of the Government. The union is fighting several other cases of its members who have been bounced on Communism charges.

FHA Moving 'Gossip'

The rumors that Federal Housing Administration will be moved out of Washington are "pure gossip" to FHA officials who say not the slighest hint has been made by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones or the Budget Bureau that FHA is to be shifted. Several FHA field officials have been transferred which apparently has led to the report that FHA's offices here will be moved. Federal Loan officials also say they have no plans to move FHA.

These officials explain that Federal Loan took the lead in moving a large bloc of its employes out of Washington when Home Owners Loan Corporation was ordered to New York City. Furthermore, they say that HOLC was ordered moved by agreement between Jesse Jones and HOLC Chairman Fahey and they don't believe it's possible for the Budget Bureau to "pick on" an agency that has already done its part in the decentralization drive on a voluntary basis. The best bet appears to be that FHA won't be touched.

Federal Works Agency allocates the space for all Federal agencies. It has been called upon to set a good example and to make some of its own space available to expanding Federal agencies. The heat has been turned on U. S. Housing Authority to move out its five regional offices that are serviced by nearly 700 employes. USHA officials are fighting the proposal. The possibility of moving Public Roads Administration also is being probed by Federal Works officials.

Civil Service Commission is so hard up for stenographers and typists in its Fourth District, that covers the States of Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and West Virginia and the District, that it has lowered the minimum age requirement from 18 to 16. . . . Employes retired at Agriculture: Mary E. Van Houten, Wilford J. Nevius, Irene S. Gibbons, and William K. ton, space for Federal offices Swanson. . . . As in Washington space for Federal offices must be a problem in New York City. The Army and the Navy want to take over the Federal Building at 90 Church Street in New York City and the Internal Revenue Bureau and several other agencies are looking for space elsewhere. It isn't generally realized but there are already more than 75,000 Federal employes in New York City.

Gypsy Chorus Sings at Sylvan Festival

Gas Company Band, Weather Vie in Delight

By Ray C. B. Brown

Community Center Department and National Capital Parks Service present the Washington Gas Light Company Employes' Band (Otto Siebeneichen, director) and the Washington Gypsy Chorus (Robert Frederick Freund, director) at the Sylvan Theater Wednesday night.

Last evening strayed from May into July for the benefit of an audience assembled at the Sylvan Theater for the fourth summer festival entertainment. By some vagary of weather, heat and humidity were banished for the nonce and replaced by the coolness of spring. Grateful for the relief from torrid discomfort, hundreds of listeners dotted the greensward of the hillside and filled the chairs in the reserved section. As the twilight deepened the crowd enjoyed for three-quarters of an hour music discoursed by the Washington Gas Light Co. Employes' Band, directed by Otto Seibeneichen.

BROWN

While this amateur organization lacks the snap and precision of professional bandsmen, it plays with spirit and with an evident pleasure in its avocation. Mr. Siebeneichen, who knows his scores and directs with authority, has a congenial task, for he meets with a willing response fro mthe men. His program was well selected for variety and popularity.

There were marches by Lithgom and Alexander, Adalbert von Keler's "Hungarian Comedy Overture," three of Moszkovski's Spanish dances, selection from Herbert's "The Fortune Teller," Ward's "The Band Played On," Lacalle's "Amapola," excerpts from Luigini's "Egyptian Ballet." and "L'Estudiantina" by Emil Waldteufel, the German composer, whose waltzes were as popular in the Paris of Napoleon the Second as were those of Johann Strauss in Vienna.

The second part of the program was taken over by the Washington Gypsy Chorus, which approached from the rear of the audience, according to custom, singing as its processional Lohr's "Where My Caravan Has Rested." Once upon the stage, to put it in Romany, Sherengro Robert Frederick Freund led the chals and chis in gillies. In other words, the chief led the boys and girls in songs.

This picturesquely costumed chorus has proved its merit on many occasions, and the singing this time was up to its standard. Solos and duets alternated with choral numbers, and Marion Venable presented two gitana dances. The one fault with the program was the paucity of real gypsy music. Cole Porter, Sigmund Romberg, Ethelbert Nevin, Rudolf Friml, Maria Grever, Manuel Ponce and other song writers represented were poor substitutes for Hungarian and Czech composers who have faithfully preserved the song lore of the gypsies.

D. E. Waid Wills Fund To Architect Institute

Dan Everett Waid, architect, who died October 31, 1939, at his home in old Greenwich, Conn., left a gross estate of $448,846 and a net estate of $374,89, according to a transfer tax appaisal filed yesterday. The American Institute of Architects, of Washington, of which he was president, will receive $180,747 for the education of architects and the public appreciation of art, to be known as the Dan E. Waid education fund.

War Experting Foreign to Her, Says Jessica Dragonette

Only Sings in Public, Star Adds; Will With Symphony Tonight

The diminutive lady shook her blonde hair and said she had nothing to say.

'People don't want to hear what I think about the foreign situation or about politics. So I never express myself in public I only sing in public."

Then, Jessica Dragonette smiled.

The lovely golden-haired lyric soprano flew into Washington last night for her appearance tonight with the National Symphony Orchestra. She is staying at the Nelson Eddy suite in the Raleigh Hotel.

Miss Dragonette is glad to talk about anything as long as it's about music. She thinks that music and song are a very important part of the defense program.

Can Help Morale

"We can do so much with song to make people happy," the singer said. "It can be such a help to the country's morale."

"I have sung the 'Star Spangled Banner' many times," she went on, "but now when I sing it, I get a feeling stronger than I have ever had before."

Miss Dragonette wore a high-neck white gown, trimmed with gold, and a petite gold-colored turban with a jaunty tassle. On her wrist was a token bracelet adorned with objects representing the products of radio sponsors for whom she has sung. The jewelry was a gift from fans in Columbus, Mo.

The soprano was last in Washington just a year ago today when she came to sing at the Watergate concert. Tonight she will sing selections from Mozart, Sibelius, Puccini, MacDowell and Wagner. A special number will be the piece, "What Price Glory?" composed by Mary Howe of this city. Tonight's program will be under the direction of the famous woman composer, Antonio Brico.

Miss Dragonette does not have a favorite song. "Every song is my favorite song when I'm singing it," she says.

The soprano will stay here until Friday, and is looking forward to a visit to the new National Gallery of Art. After her return to New York, she will fly to Cheyenne, Wyo., where she is to be "made an Indian Princess" in a State rodeo on July 15. She and the Governor of Wyoming will ride into the rodeo together on a horse.

Then she will return to New York to open a series of Saturday evening radio concerts.

Blind G. A. R. Veteran, 100 Tomorrow, Is Young in Spirit

A doughty Connecticut Yankee who can recall details of Civil War battles in which he fought as clearly as you would describe something that happened yesterday will be 100 years old tomorrow.

He is Albert Milton Lathrop, still sound of body and young in spirit, though he lives in darkness.

Yesterday an interviewer asked him what are his impressions on the approach of centenartianism.

Lanky and white haired, the blind G. A. R. veteran replied in a firm voice:

"I regard it as a blessing, not in a material sense, but a favor of divine origin."

Sightless for nearly 2 years, he has his two daughters, Miss Edith Lathrop and Mrs. Susan E. Myer, to read the newspapers to him, asking to be kept informed particularly of political and war developments. They make their home together at 1321 Euclid Street Northwest.

When the War Between the States broke out, young Lathrop wanted to enlist, but his father forbade him. He waited until his twenty-first birthday, on July 11, 1862, and then enlisted in Company E, Eighteenth Connecticut Infantry.

Private Lathrop fought at Winchester, Summit's Point, New Market, Piedmont, Lynchburg, Lexington and Buchanan. After the rout of the Federals at Winchester, he fled on foot to Pennsylvania to escape capture.

Mustered out two months after the war's end, he married and settled down as a farmer and school teacher in Connecticut. In 1872, he moved to Nebraska, which was his home for 54 years. At 83, despite failing eyesight, he was still active as an educator, businessman and civic leader.

One day a tree which he was attempting to cut down fell on him and crushed an artery in the leg. It had to be amputated. Not long afterward he came to Washington to live with his two daughters.

They have invited Nebraska Senator George W. Norris, who celebrates his eightieth birthday the same day, to join them in a little reception which will be held tomorrow at the Euclid Street residence. Also expected are the junior Nebraska Senator, Hugh A. Butler, and Representative Carl T. Curtis, of the Lathrops' home district.

Court Cases Gain, More Judges Asked

District Tribunal Handled 8,959, 341 More Than When Year Started

More judges, more clerks and more facilities are badly needed by the District Court, Col. Charles E. Stewart, clerk, declared yesterday as he announced "a material increase" in the court's work in the last fiscal year.

The court closed 8,959 cases of all kinds, 341 more than were begun, in the year which ended June 30. Yet unfinished business equal to several months' work confronted the justices as the new fiscal year began.

Pending on July 1 were 4,679 civil cases and 433 criminal cases. Two justices will be on the bench all summer to cut down the jam of criminal cases. Many of the defendants are in jail waiting for trial.

Gain in Civil Division

The court's gain against the congested docket during the year was won in the civil division, where 7,047 cases were terminated while 6,606 were being filed. The criminal work lagged; 1,912 cases were closed, while 2,012 new ones were being started.

Col. Stewart pointed out that 528 more cases were started in the court in the last fiscal year than in the year before, continuing an increase in business that has prevailed for several years.

Col. Stewart's report demonstrated that much progress is accounted for by the pretrial hearings, where 1,128 cases were settled without the necessity of formal trials. Pretrial Justice Oscar R. Luhring heard 236 other disputes, which were later tried on issues simplified by the preliminary.

The domestic relations commissioner system adopted by the court after extensive investigation by Justice Bolitha J. Laws was credited with disposing of 387 family disputes out of court. Commissioner Philip Hamilton and his taff handled a total of 466 cases during the year, only 40 of which are still before them.

Want Citizenship Back

American-born women with foreign husbands flocked to the court during the year to regain their citizenship. Repatriation was granted 103 persons who took the oath of allegiance during the year, compared with only nine in the previous year.

The number of persons admitted to citizenship during the fiscal year was 779, compared with 657 in the previous year. Rejections dropped from 23 to 19. There were 212 more applications for naturalization than in the previous year. The number awaiting action has correspondingly increased.

It was Col. Stewart's own office, however, which reported the most startling gain. It is to his assistants that applications for marriage licenses are made. And applications went up from 6,097 to 9,717.

Congressman Gets Quick Action; Auto Thief Caught

At least one Congressman had words of praise for the Washington Police Department yesterday, because . . .

An automobile stolen from a constituent was recovered in a jiffy, hardly three blocks from the scene of the crime.

Representative Joseph O'Brien, of New York, reported the theft for Harry H. Hurt, of Rochester, N. Y., who left his car with the motor running in front of the Raleigh Hotel, Twelfth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, for a moment while he stepped inside.

A radio lookout was broadcast, and Traffic Policeman Charles E. Rabbitt and C. E. Glass spotted the car at Fifteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. The driver, a 30-year-old salesman, was a bit unsteady on his feet, they said.

Monument May Lose Its Aluminum Cap

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia can have the Nation's best known and most widely gaped at piece of aluminum, good for at least one ten-thousandth of a bombing plane, if he asks for it to start off his defense aluminum scrap collection campaign.

The prize piece of the vitally needed defense metal is located on top of the Washington Monument, as the capstone.

The piece, 9 inches high, was the largest aluminum casting in the world in 1880, when it was made. As such, it was displayed in the window of Tiffany's jewelry store in New York.

2 Persons Die In Washington Area Traffic

D. C. traffic deaths this year .. 43
Deaths this date last year ... 37
District total last year 79

Two Washingtonians were dead last night as the result of traffic accidents. They were:

John B. Cress, 39, of 1131 Eleventh Street Northwest.

Mrs. Anna Minor, 58, of 922 Sheridan Street Northwest.

Cress was knocked from his bicycle on Route 1 near the new airport as he pedaled to work at the Bureau of Public Roads research laboratory on Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard. He was taken to the Alexandria Hospital by the Alexandria Rescue Squad and died a few hours later.

Driver of the auto striking Cress was Lieut. Joe Still, of the Army Medical Corps at Fort Belvoir, Va., police said. Lieut. Still was released to custody of Fort Belvoir authorities by United States Commissioner John M. Monroe, jr., of Alexandria. A passenger in the officer's auto gave a signed statement to the commissioner, declaring that Cress' bicycle swerved directly in front of Still's auto.

Mrs. Minor was struck by an auto at Georgia Avenue and Aspen Street Northwest. James H. Kirk, 35, of Chevy Chase, Md., was the operator of the auto striking her, police said.

The victim was taken to Walter Reed Hospital nearby, where she died. Kirk was placed under a technical charge of "held for the coroner."

Five-year-old Barbara Ann Wilhelm, of 1620 Minnesota Avenue Northeast, suffered severe injuries to the face and body yesterday when, according to police, she ran into the side of an auto in front of her home.

3d Division Opens Reunion Today

Survivors of the A. E. F.'s Third Division, who stopped the Germans on the Marne July 18, 1918, will open a three-day reunion, their twenty-second, at the Willard Hotel today.

It was the fighting Third Division which held crack German troops for four days and finally drove them back across the Marne. During the World War the division lost 3,140 men, and 13,560 others were wounded.

About 1,500 members of the Third Division Society, A. E. F., and their families are expected for the reunion.

Truck Kills Md. Boy

Baltimore, July 9 (AP).—Lee Ford, 8, was killed today when his new scooter darted under a moving truck.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Ickes Adopts D. C. Gas Saving Plan as Model

Washington's program for voluntary conservation of gasoline and motor oil in the interest of national defense was adopted as a model for the Eastern Seaboard yesterday by Interior Secretary Ickes, petroleum coordinator.

Ickes wrote to the Governors of 16 Atlantic States calling attention to the District's "effective" plan and urging them to take similar steps in their own jurisdictions.

Washington was the first city in the country to inaugurate a "save gas" program and motorists have been asked to cut motor fuel consupmtion 20 per cent.

Today, it was announced by Maj. Beverly C. Snow, assistant Engineer Commissioner and chairman of the District Petroleum Conservation Committee, local merchants will begin to display posters requesting customers to carry home all small purchases to avoid unnecessary truck deliveries.

The posters will be distributed by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and will read: "Aid National Defense. Save Gasoline. Please Take Small Packages With You."

Deliveries Curtailed

It was further announced by Maj. Snow that beginning July 12, no deliveries of building supplies will be made on Saturdays. This was agreed to in a cooperative move by the building supply dealers' group of the Merchant and Manufacturers Association, he said.

Some 10,000 questionnaires, said Maj. Snow, are ready for distribution to employes of the District government to determine travel habits to and from work.

"It is the desire of the committee," Maj. Snow declared, "to encourage municipal employes to make greater use of mass transportation facilities or be 'neighborly, and give his next-door or nearby neighbor a ride to the office."

In his letters to the Governors, Ickes warned of an impending shortage in gasoline and fuel oils because of a drastic cut in tanker service to Atlantic Coast States.

"I am sending you," said Ickes, "a copy of a program for an effective campaign that is now being conducted in the District of Columbia. It shows many ways in which petroleum products, especially gasoline, can be conserved."

Asking the Governors to take immediate action in formulating programs, Ickes added:

"The American people are equal to this emergency. I am certain that if the present situation is fully explained to them they will cooperate loyally."

States included in the Ickes request are Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Vermont.

FALSE TEETH

And True Love

(OR) HOW GERTRUDE GOT HER MAN

Although Miss Gertrude Gaines had planned
To wed within the year,
Her gay romance was nearly wrecked.
The reason? Lend an ear:

1. Her false teeth, scrub them as she might,
Got dingy, dull and dirty.
Twixt "Denture Breath" and ruined smile,
They made her "old" at thirty.

3. So straightway Gert got POLIDENT.
Her wedding? Very nice!
THE MORAL: All who wear false teeth
Should take the same advice!

2. "Get POLIDENT!" her dentist said.
"Its no-brush, no-scrub action
Makes plates and bridges 'look like new'
Gives instant satisfaction."

Gleams, Purifies Without Brushing
Do this every day: Add a little POLIDENT Powder to half a glass of water. Stir. Put in plate or bridge 10 to 15 minutes. Rinse, and it's ready to use.

Jury Trial Asked By Man Accused Of Tire Slashing

Accused of slashing the tires of an automobile owned by two nonstriking employes of the Arcade-Sunshine Laundry Co., Jesse Purvis, colored, 25, of 802 V Street Northwest, pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial in Police Court yesterday.

Purvis, who is one of the strikers at the plant, was identified by an 8-year-old boy who allegedly saw the act. Purvis was released under $200 bail pending assignment of the case in jury court.

The strike of 360 employes who are members of Local 199-B of the Cleaners and Laundry Workers Union, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, C. I. O., began a week ago yesterday.

Husbands Named Head Of Defense Plant Corp.

Sam H. Husbands, a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has been elected president of the Defense Plant Corporation, an RFC subsidiary set-up to promote the establishment of arms factories. Husbands is a former resident of Florence, S. C.

A. T. Hobson has been elected president of the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

Bar Group Will Aid in Social Welfare

E. Barrett Prettyman, president of the District Bar Association, yesterday announced formation of a general committee on social problems.

The group will cooperate with subsidiary committees on legal aid, defense of needy charged with crime, low cost legal service, practices of credit houses, small loans, exemption laws and the problem of habitual drunkards.

Named members of the general committee were Sefton Darr, former bar president; Frederick A. Ballard, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, District Attorney Edward M. Curran and Dean Hill Stanley.

Commenting on formation of a separate group to study the drunkenness problem, Prettyman referred to his observations when he was corporation counsel. "The problem of 'repeaters'," he said, "at first amazed and then deeply disturbed me. As I remember it, the champion has been sentenced to jail for drunkenness an average of five times a year for 30 years. It seems to me that this is a problem of disease instead of a problem of criminality. I should like to see a careful study made of the situation to see if the legal profession and the bench are not guilty of a serious mistake in their approach to this situation."

Prettyman said he had adopted the plan of a general committee because the studies of the subcommittees appeared parts of the same subject, so that a general report, fitting the parts into the picture, would be a major service to the bar and to the community as a whole."

Policeman Forgot Willkie's Name

When Wendell Willkie appeared at the White House yesterday to confer with President Roosevelt, a policeman stationed at the West Executive Avenue entrance realized that the visitor had been there before but could not remember his name.

"I recognized him but couldn't remember his name," said the officer.

"I said, 'Are you Mr. . . . er . . .' and he answered, 'Yes, I'm Mr. Willkie.'

"He asked me how to get upstairs, and I showed him. That's all there was to it."

Mrs. Breckenridge, 7 Nurses Feared Lost in Sub Attacks

Mrs. Ruth Breckinridge, prominent in Washington and Winston-Salem, N. C., society, and seven American Red Cross nurses were reported feared lost at sea last night as the result of two ship sinkings attributed to submarines.

National Red Cross headquarters reported that six nurses were missing out of ten who sailed June 5 from a Gulf port aboard a British ship. The vessel, which was not further identified, was torpedoed about two weeks ago, Red Cross officials said.

Mrs. Breckinridge and another missing nurse, Miss Maxine C. Loomis, of Springfield, Mass., were aboard the former Dutch ship Maasdam, which sailed from an Atlantic port early in June and was sunk a few days later.

Mrs. Breckinridge sailed to serve as house mother to the 60 nurses at the Harvard Hospital in London. In 1925 she was divorced from Col. Henry Breckinridge, former attorney for Charles Lindbergh. Formerly she lived in Edgemoor, Md.

It was reported at first that all 17 Red Cross volunteers on the Maasdam had been saved, but to date only 15 are known to have been rescued.

The six reported missing from the unnamed vessel were:

Phyllis L. Evans, 24, Everett, Mass.

Dorothy C. Morse, 23, Boston.

Nancie M. Pett, 26, Detroit.

Helen Jurewicz, South Amboy, N. J.

Margaret I. Somerville, 28, Catskill, N. Y.

Dorothea L. Koehn, 36, Oshkosh, Wis.

Norman H. Davis, Red Cross national chairman, declared that "It is with deepest sorrow that the Red Cross is compelled to announce that these brave women, en route to Great Britain on a vitally important mission of mercy, have been subjected to such barbaric treatment."

The American Red Cross Harvard Hospital, their destination, was organized to study disease under wartime conditions and the latest and best methods of caring for war victims under modern warfare.

Negro Abolitionist Statue to Survey Rochester Park

Rochester, N. Y., July 9 (AP).—A statue of Frederick Douglass, famed Negro abolitionist, which for more than 40 years has stood in a smoky industrial section, soon will survey the beauty of the Highland Park lilac center.

The city council last night voted to move the statue on petition of Negro citizens. Funds for the monument were raised by popular subscription and the then Governor, Theodore Roosevelt, came here for the unveiling in 1898.

Douglass, born in slavery in Maryland in 1817, escaped in 1838. He came to Rochester in 1847 and edited what is believed to have been the first Negro newspaper in North America. He died in 1895.

Griff Defends Rescinded Rule

Chicago, July 9.—The vote was 5-to-3 when the American League balloted the other day to junk Clark Griffith's blockade aimed at pennant-winning clubs. Henceforth, the team winning the pennant will be permitted to make deals with the same freedom of the seven other clubs. Griffith's rule lasted only two years.

POVICH

"It's still a good rule," snorted the Nats' owner after his defeat in the league meeting. "We only needed one more vote to make it a tie and my rule would still be on the books. Consarn it, we've got to even this league up. Nobody but the Yankees and Tigers have won a pennant since Washington won it in 1933. The league's top-heavy."

More than any other man, Griffith must be credited with bringing an end to the Yankee dynasty which had dominated the league for four years until 1940. It was his legislation, which he pounded through the winter meeting of 1939, that served the same purpose which the movement to "break up the Yankees" sought. Griffith didn't break up the Yanks. With his rule, he merely permitted them to disintegrate, which produced the same effect.

Forbidden, as pennant winners, to buy any players from other league clubs after their 1939 victory, the Yanks couldn't win in 1940. They needed pitchers and outfielders and they were laboring along with a shortstop that was hitting less than .200. In the ordinary course of events, the Yanks with their fat bankroll would have bought the necessary parts of a ball club, from teams that would sell, but Griffith's rule closed the door.

Griff Believes Rule Will Be Restored

"It was a great thing for baseball that the Yanks didn't win last year," said Griffith. "Interest perked up all around the league, and it was a dog-fight down to the finish in three or four cities. That was good for the league. It was a good rule, and they ought to keep it. By gum, I wouldn't be surprised if they restore it in a couple of years. If the Yankees start running away with things again, they'll be glad I thought up that rule."

A shift in league sentiment brought about the defeat of Griffith's legislation. Griffith cast Washington's vote, of course, and he was supported by the Cleveland and Philadelphia clubs, which had also voted originally for the rule. But there was a disaffection in the Griffith ranks during the vote the other day. The Detroit and Boston teams which originally had voted with Griffith backed down on the rule this time.

Cleveland, of course, had a paramount reason for sticking with Griffith. The Indians' ownership, doubtless seeing the handwriting on the wall, sought to protect its own interest. The Yankees are now out in front in the pennant race again, and are building up another club of the type that held sway for four consecutive years. That would mean that Cleveland's pennant, already deferred for 20 years, would be farther away than ever.

The Tigers naturally voted against Griffith this time. They have felt the sting of the rule, and don't like it. In fact, it may be costing them another pennant at this time. The Tigers have the money with which to buy the kind of infielders that could put them back in the thick of the race, but they are stymied by Griffith's legislation. It has hurt.

Tigers Took Their Medicine

In fact, the Tigers didn't like the idea of blockading the pennant winners before last season ended, but they were sort of powerless to do anything about it. Having profited from the rule that had worked against the Yankees, Owner Walter O. Briggs of Detroit, had compunctions against voting for its abrogation in a year that would benefit the Tigers. He decided that the Tigers, like the Yankees, should take their medicine.

Griffith's blockade has been distasteful to other club owners. They felt a bit ashamed of the fact that the only way the league could stop the Yankees from running away with the pennant races was by legislating against them in the council halls rather than by beating them on the ball field.

"There's nothing to be ashamed about," says Griffith. "Money has been deciding these pennant races. I was trying to get some sort of equality in the league. The team that wins the pennant always has a big money-making season. It's usually a good team, of course, and with money to spend can replace players as they are needed. If we didn't do something about it, the pennant winner would always have a big edge before the season starts. One pennant, with its financial profits, would lead to another. That's the thing I object to, and that's why I like my rule."

The Malady Lingers On at Cleveland

New York, July 9.—The big league ball clubs are leveled away for the second half of the season. The Yanks and Dodgers are three games out on top of the Indians and Cardinals, and the indications that a nickel will get you between both points of the World Series this fall now grow stronger. Because the challengers, the Indians and the Cards, are failing, while the leaders are still short of their best and should improve.

CONSIDINE

The Yanks have been getting along sensationally with an absolute minimum of pitching. The Dodgers have progressed to their present lead with little help from Joe Medwick or Pee-Wee Reese, two ordinarily great forces within the team. It is a cinch that each of these men will improve, just as it seems more than wishful thinking to say that the long hot days ahead will loosen the stiff muscles of the older Yankee pitchers.

Ossie Vitt has gone but the inherent malady lingers on at Cleveland. Roy Weatherly was fined for loafing, then wheeled on Roger Peckinpaugh and cursed the manager roundly in front of his players, which certainly did nothing to aid morale. It is hard to generalize about a group of men, but the Cleveland bunch just doesn't seem to have what goes with a superior ball club. As the years go on, the club appears to be almost as much of an anchor tied to the ankle of Bobby Feller as Washington used to be a sashweight affixed to Walter Johnson.

The Cards aren't hitting, and are fragile. But they can't be counted out now, nor, of course, can the Indians. For the past two seasons the Cards have put on great stretch drives and may do it again. We don't anticipate much in the way of stretch driving from the Indians, but there is always the likelihood that the Yankee bats will cool off. And if they do, and the pitching doesn't improve, we don't see how the club will stay up. Right now those bludgeons appear to be heated for all time. It is beginning to take imagination to envision either the Indians or Cards or the hit or miss Reds dropping a slug in our subway series.

Now as One Writer to Another . . .

We sympathize heartily with our Cleveland baseball writing friends in their current heartaches. They take their ball club very much to heart in Cleveland. At Chicago earlier in the year, when the Yanks were in fifth place and the Indians were breezing out on top, the Chicago writers in the rear rows of the press box, during a Cleveland-Chicago game, amused themselves by flicking peanut shells down on the industrious heads of the Cleveland writers.

Finally one writer stood up and there were tears in his eyes.

"Can't you leave us alone?" he cried. "Don't you realize there's a lot of strain to winning a pennant?"

In answer to a flood of letters, let us say that Joe Dimaggio's streak will not be broken if rival pitchers should walk him every time he appears at the plate during a contest. Will Harridge, Ford Frick and the Al Munro Elias statistical bureau all have gone on record to state that it wouldn't be fair to Dimaggio to have his streak ended in a game in which he didn't have a chance to hit a ball.

As far as we're concerned, the chances of Joe's getting four walks in a single game, during this streak, are about a thousand to one. For one thing, there isn't much sense in passing Dimaggio in order to get to Keller. Another thing, the pitcher would have to throw those balls mighty wide to keep Joe from belting one. During his streak he has made hits off bad pitches he'd never think of "adding at," in normal times.

Ted Will Have to Improve

Willie Keeler had a good dry sense of humor. While playing with the Highlanders that New York team went into a fearful slump. The manager, after 12 or 15 losses, called the players together for a skull practice and, with the aid of a blackboard, showed them just how to win a ball game. Then he dismissed them.

"All right, boys, we won that one," said Keeler. "Now let's go out on the field and get an even break for the day."

Which would you rather have on your team, Williams or Dimag? We didn't think there was any great question to this until recently we mentioned in passing that DiMag was clearly superior. Some tart readers promptly wrote in and asked what Williams had to do to get a break from New York sportswriters, ya bum ya.

All right, we'll answer that one. What he'll have to do is improve his fielding and stay in there and battle until the ninth inning, as he did so grandly in the All-Star game. He is inclined to wilt like drug-store lettuce in losing ball games. DiMaggio isn't. We think that Dimaggio's better spirit and superior fielding gives him an edge over Ted which would amount to as much as $100,000—if the two were placed on the open market and bid for by responsible baseball men.

'Red' Grange Defends Zuppke, His Old Coach

'Galloping Ghost' Charges Wilson, Illini Athletic Director, Undermined Grid Mentor

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 9.—Football's famous Galloping Ghost, Harold (Red) Grange, "hit the line" verbally today on behalf of his old coach, Bob Zuppke, of Illinois.

In the latest development of the long controversy over Zuppke's job as Illini gridiron mentor, Grange charged that Wendell S. Wilson, Illinois athletic director, had offered him a coaching job at Illinois and that Wilson said he (Wilson) was to become head coach and athletic director.

In a written statement, Grange said that Wilson made the offer in 1938, and at the same time said he planned to obtain the services of Bert Ingwersen, Northwestern coach, and Benny Oosterbaan, of Michigan. Grange said Wilson told him he had obtained Zuppke's resignation to pave the way for those steps.

"I asked him if the authorities had approved the action and he said the athletic board had taken such action and that it had been approved by President Willard," Grange said.

It was in November, 1938, that Zuppke's resignation—which his supporters charge was obtained under pressure—was rejected by the Illinois board of trustees.

"I believe that if Illinois loses Zuppke the repercussions will reach unimaginable heights and that the university will suffer irreparable damage," said Grange, greatest of a long line of stars developed by the 62-year-old mentor who has been head coach at Illinois 28 seasons.

Defends Zuppke

"The present unpleasant situation unfortunately has made Zuppke the issue. I do not believe it should be necessary for a football coach to spend his time securing athletes. If it is up to someone to attract players it should be the job of the athletic director or someone especially designated for the work. Zup should not be humiliated and driven to things below his dignity.

"I feel sure the board of trustees in their wisdom will not allow the prejudices and ambitions of selfish persons to deprive Illinois of this great figure."

Grange said he had declined Wilson's offer of the coaching job "because it is a well known fact that the salaries at Champaign are very small."

The one-time Illini backfield all-American termed as "ridiculous" the charge, made by some critics, that Zuppke had outlived his usefulness. Grange said that years ago Zuppke used the "T" formation at Illinois—the same formation that so excited the football world last fall. Grange also said he was "surprised" that Zuppke had done as well as he had in the past few years "with the material at hand and the feeling he was being constantly undermined."

Mrs. Cooke Wins at Scene Of Net Debut

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 9.—Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, of New York, returned to the scene of her girlhood triumphs today and scored two victories to join the parade into the third round of the Middle States Grass Courts Women's Tennis Tournament.

Mrs. Cooke, seeded No. 2, who won the national junior girl's title in 1928, '29 and '30 at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, defeated 19-year-old Betty Shellenberger of the Host Club, 6—0, 6—1, in the first round, then eliminated Cecila (Babe) Bowes, national squash racquets queen, 6—2, 6—0.

The tournament got under way after two days of delay because of rain.

Miss Helen Jacobs, former American and English Champion now residing in Greenville, Del., led the way into the third round with an easy 6—0, 6—0 victory over 15-year-old Peggy Heebner, Ardmore, Pa. Miss Jacobs, seeded first, draw a bye for the first round.

Defending Champion Helen Bernhard of New York, No. 3, advanced to the second round with a 6—4, 6—1 victory over Mrs. Esther Corry, Philadelphia. Miss Bernard staged a surprise last year in beating Miss Jacobs for the Middle States title.

Toczylowski Selected For All-Star Grid Post

New York, July 9 (AP).—Henry Toczylowski, Boston College quarterback, was selected today by Jim Crowley for the Eastern All-Star Football team, which will meet the New York Giants in the Herald-Tribune's fresh-air fund game at the Polo Grounds, September 3. Crowley, Fordham mentor, will coach the all-stars.

Tigers Win Over Grand Rapids, 6-1

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 9 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers, behind excellent pitching by Harold Newhouser and Schoolbooy Rowe, defeated the Grand Rapids Colts of the Michigan State League, 6 to 1, in an exhibition game before 3,000 fans today.

Newhouser pitched the first six innings and gave the Colts three of their four hits, one a home run by Walt Chipple. He struck out 12.

Aitken, Miami Fishing Director, Passes Away

Miami, Fla., July 9 (AP).—Tommy Aitken, 55, executive director of the $10,000 Metropolitan Miami fishing tournament, died today after a long illness.

For several years he was salt water fishing editor for Outdoor Life magazine in New York. He came here in 1938 for his health.

He leaves the widow, Mrs. Betty Aitken, and a son by a former marriage, Kenneth Aitken, of Malone, N. Y.

Funeral services will be conducted at Miami Beach Friday.

Dave Johnsen, Welsh Beaten At Spring Lake

By the Associated Press

Spring Lake, N. J., July 9.—Seventh-seeded Charles Mattmann, of Los Angeles, Calif., and eighth-seeded J. Gilbert Hall, East Orange veteran, were knocked out of the ninth annual Spring Lake Invitation Tennis Tournament today in the third round.

Unseeded Francis X. Shields, of New York, former Davis Cup star, outlasted the erratic Californian, 6—4, 3—6, 8—6. Hall was elminated by youthful Francisco Segura, the South American champion from Ecuador, 7—5, 9—7.

Top-seeded Frankie Parker, the defending champion from Altadena, Calif., won over Charles E. Channing, of Washington, D. C., 6—4, 6—1, in the second round. Parker is a round behind the field.

The other quarter-final berths were filled by seeded players today. Second-seeded Wayne R. Sabin of Reno, Nev., won over William Gifford, of Ithaca, N. Y., 6—2, 6—3, and followed with a 6—2, 6—2 triumph over Fred Nolde of Montoloking.

John A. Kramer, of East Los Angeles, Calif., ranked third, subdued Henry Canda, of Princeton, 6—2, 7—5, and Bernard Welsh, of Rockville, Md., 6—3, 6—4.

Fourth-seeded Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., runner-up to Parker here the past two years, put out young Billy Umstaedter, of Millburn, in his only match of the day, 6—4, 2—6, 6—1.

Edward Alloo, of Palo Alto, Calif., ranked sixth, breezed through David S. Johnsen, of Washington, D. C., 6—3, 6—0, and then downed Edward J. Moylan, of Trenton, 6—4, 6—2.

Pitcher Herb Hash Lost to Colonels After Breakdown

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., July 8.—Bruce Dudley, president of the Louisville American Association baseball club, said tonight that Herb Hash, 26-year-old pitcher for the Colonels would be out of baseball for at least the rest of this season as the result of a "general physical breakdown."

Hash, whose home is in South Boston, Va., came to Louisville from the Boston Red Sox about a month after the opening of the current season.

Bout Stopped By Referee In 9th Round

6,000 Fans Thrilled In First Fight Held At Ebbets Field In Five Years

By Robert B. Cooke
Herald-Tribune Sports Writer

Ebbets Field, N. Y., July 9—Chick Meehan, making his first time start as a fight promoter brought boxing back to Ebbets Field tonight for the first time in five years, but it was due more to the efforts of Steve Mamakos, a gallant Greek from Washington, D. C., than to Meehan's promotorial genius, that the crowd of 6,000 fans deemed the evening a success.

Mamakos, who was pitted against Tami Mauriello, a whirlwind from the Bronx, in the main event, lost by a technical knockout at 1:15 of the ninth round in a scheduled ten-round bout. Eddie Josephs, the referee, intervened at that point and Mamakos almost took a swing at this neutral party when he realized what was transpiring.

Many of the customers had appeared at Ebbets Field more through curiosity than anything else because of the rarity of boxing programs at Ebbets Field. They went away with the feeling that they had seen more than they had bargained for.

Mauriello Outweighs Foe

Mauriello, holding a 5-pound weight advantage over Mamakos, the Hellenian from Washington, was a 3-1 favorite as the pair entered the ring. Inside of 10 seconds he had floored Mamakos with his brutal right but the Greek, like his ancestors used to do at Thermopylae, retaliated with such a flurry of blows before the round was over that he won the onlookers there and then.

Again in the next two rounds Mauriello tried to pulverize Mamakos with his burning right and again the Hellenic warrior withstood the savage thrusts. After each round Mamakos received more and more applause for his gameness which seemed to know no bounds.

In the fifth round Mauriello hit his opponent so hard that he hurt his right hand. Mamakos fell for a moment, but was back on his feet before the referee could start counting.

Thereafter, Mauriello had no weapon except his left. However, he had tired Mamakos in the early going and was able to employ his one serviceable arm both defensively and offensively. As Mamakos was being battered by Mauriello's left in the ninth, Josephs stepped in and stopped the fight while the crowd booed with unanimous fervor.

Might Have Gone Distance

There was no doubt that Mauriello had won, but it seemed equally certain to the customers that Mamakos could have gone the distance. Josephs didn't think so. He was practically alone in his opinion. The patrons cheered Mamakos as he left the ring after greeting the announcement of Mauriello's victory in comparative silence.

It was a perfect night for boxing, but it is probable that the crowd would not have been so large had it not been for the scale of tickets which were peddled at three levels, $3.45, $2 and $1.15. The rock-bottom $1.15 price caught the fancy of a number of fans, who eagerly devoured these ducats, only to discover, upon entering the park, that they were supposed to sit a country mile from ringside.

Veenker to Study Football Injuries

Ames, Iowa, July 9 (AP).—Appointment of George A. Veenker, Iowa State College athletic director, as chairman of a three-man committee to continue studies of football injuries and safety methods was announced here today.

Dr. Marvin A. Stevens, of New York University, and Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood, of Purdue University, are other committee members.

The group, cooperating with the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the American Football Coaches Association, will continue studies conducted since 1931.

Sammy Snead, Nelson, Guldahl, Hogan Win Two Matches as Field Narrows to 16

By the United Press

Cherry Hills Club, Denver, July 9.—National Open King Craig Wood, along with former champions, Henry Picard and Paul Runyan, fell by the wayside today in the short, sudden death 18-hole matches of the twenty-fourth Professional Golfers Association Championship.

Two others, Defending Champion Byron Nelson, and three times P. G. A. Titlist Gene Sarazen, narrowly escaped.

It was a day of great golf and resounding upsets.

In the opening round, played under a scorching morning sun, big Henry Picard, of Oklahoma City, P. G. A. champion in 1939, was beaten easily by Phil Greenwald, Menominee Falls, Wis., veteran playing his first P. G. A. tourney.

Then little Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., twice winner of this tournament, was nipped 1 up by Horton Smith, the putting wizard from Pinehurst, N. C.

Wood Loses, 6 and 5

Late in the day, during a blistering second round, Wood went down to an inglorious 6 and 5 defeat at the hands of a tall, skinny professional from Oakland, Calif., Mark Fry—who played with an impaired eye nerve which affected his vision.

But Fry, one of five golf pro brothers, could see the line on every putt. Once on the green he couldn't miss. In the morning round he had 10 one-putt greens and in the afternoon against Wood he was laying them so dead he could have dropped them with both eyes on the blink. The match ended on the thirteenth green with Fry winning, 6 and 5.

Nelson had two close squeaks—in the morning when pint-sized Bunny Torpey, of Dodson, Mo.,

Griffith Denies Ice Water Sold At Ball Park

Clark C. Griffith, the venerable president of the Nats who Tuesday was accused in a New York sportswriter's column of selling ice water at the ball park, last night said it ain't so—and in very strong terms.

"Oh, no, that's silly," Griffith protested when asked about the charge. "We wouldn't think of doing anything like that. Whoever started that rumor is just some louse and I'd like to get hold of him."

The New York columnist said that when the ball park ran out of soft drinks at a recent doubleheader that Griffith's men began selling ice water for 10 cents a glass.

Firecracker Irks Pro Football Star on 18th Green in Columbia Links Competition

Mrs. Leo Walper, former District women's champion, and Texas Charley Malone, the Redskin end, played an alternate shot round of 75 strokes to win low gross honors in the Maryland State mixed foursome tournament yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

Mrs. Walper and Malone were out in 35 strokes, even par, but took 40 on the return trip, including a five on the eighteenth hole. They had four for a 74 and were on the eighteenth green in two strokes, but a firecracker exploded from the vicinity of the swimming pool just as Malone was on the down stroke of a putt and he jabbed it 5 feet past the cup. Mrs. Walper then missed coming back.

Low net honors went to Jerry Welble, American University's golfing coed, and Maury Fitzgerald, the golfing sportswriter from Kenwood who put together the second best round of the day, 76, and deducted 10 handicap strokes for a net of 66. They were out in 40 but came back in 36, including a deuce on the sixteenth hole where Miss Welble tapped a 2-foot putt home for a birdie, and a four on the eighteenth, where her partner holed a 15-footer.

Three Tie for Second

Three teams tied with 77s for second gross but Dr. and Mrs. Walter Stokes, of Manor, also figured in second low net with 77—6—71. They were tied for second net with the Beaver Dam combination of Mrs. L. E. Libby and Bob Sherwood, with 90—19—71.

Last year's gross winners, Mrs. Myron Davy, of the host club, and M. Parker Nolan, the recently dethroned Mayland State champion, tied for second gross when Mrs. Davy knocked a second shot within 18 inches of the pin on the eighteenth hole and Nolan holed the putt for a birdie 3 and 77.

The other 77 went to the only Baltimore tandem to finish in the prize list, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, of Five Farms, and Buck Armstrong, State amateur semifinalist from Bonnie View. Fifty teams competed in the first event of its kind this year.

Mrs. Walper dropped 3 putts of the 20-foot variety on the first nine to help the low gross winners compile an out nine of 35, which included a 3 on the long par-4 sixth, toughest hole on the course, where Malone took Mrs. Walper's drive and knocked a spoon 20 feet from the cup and she holed the putt.

They started back 5-6, three over par, with Malone blaming himself for the bogeys, but the winning team came back with a par on the twelfth and played good golf until the three-putt lapse on 18. In all they three-putted three greens, and still had 75.

The winning net round of Miss Welble and Fitzgerald was helped by Fitzgerald's chip shot into the cup on the fifth hole and a birdie on the seventh, but it was on the back nine where they both played their best golf and turned in the 36.

The District Golf Association's annual Mixed Scotch Foursome event will be played next Tuesday at Congressional. Entries are being accepted at the club by Dr. W. C. Barr.

Bombers Score Over Hurricanes, 13 to 4

The Bombers defeated the Hurricanes, 13 to 4, yesterday in the opening game of the newly organized Burleith Twilight Softball League. The winning battery was Pitcher Crutchfield and Catcher Sylvester. Leading offensive star for the winner was "Bunker" Hill who led their 19-hit attack with four out of five.

Reliance Nine Gains 6-6 Tie With Cameo

The Cameo Furniture nine drifted into the seventh inning with a 6-2 lead over the Reliance Insurance Co. team in a Washington Post-Industrial League game on the Ellipse yesterday, but a sudden batting spree from Reliance evened the score and the game ended in a tie, 6 to 6, when darkness halted the proceedings at the end of the ninth.

Activities in the seventh began when Oertel, Reliance centerfielder, singled to left and England hit to Cameo's Hahn. Bonifant, Cameo shortstop, dropped Hahn's throw and both runners were safe. Sokol hit to third and on Jack James' error, Oertel and England scored. McNeil singled to left, W. Robertson hit to third, and Cameo's Woody Godfrey committed his second error of the game by throwing the ball over first, allowing two runs and tying the score.

Seeks Friday Game

The Western Union softball team is seeking a game for Friday afternoon. Call Lincoln 3901-R between 5:30 and 6:30.

forced him to take the last 2 holes for a 1-up victory, and in the afternoon as Bill Heinlein, of Noblesville, Ind., carried him again to the final green, where a par earned the 1940 champ another 1-up decision.

Sarazen, the showman, playing golf and wisecracking with the gallery with equal kill, won without trouble in the opener, taking out Joe Burch, of Mobile, Ala., 5 and 4, but little Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio, matched Sarazen stroke for stroke in the second round. They were all even at 18, and then Sarazen after squinting nonchalantly at the line for a few seconds, tapped in a 10-foot putt on the nineteenth green for an extra-hole victory.

Slammin' Sam Snead and Bustin Ben Hogan, the tourney's co-favorites and two of its longest hitters, both came through. Snead was shaky in the morning and had to go 23 holes before he eliminated Earl Martin of Inglewood, Calif., after trailing 2 down on the seventeenth tee, but he was unbeatable the next time out. Greenwald, Picard's conqueror, lost the first hole and was behind all the way. Snead finished things on the twelfth hole, winning 7 and 6.

Hogan, who can wham a drive two yards for each of his 140 pounds, was doing just that all day and drilling the middle with them all. He beat Frank Walsh of Rumson, N. J., 5 and 4 and Bud Oakley of Palos Verdes, Calif., 2 up.

Rut Coffey, the Hagerstown, Md., professional, lost in the first round to Harry Bassler, the Californian who was coleader in the first day's medal play. Bassler was under par as he ended the match on the fifteenth green, 4 and 3.

Palace Engages Maccabees Tonight

The Palace A. C., defeated only once in the first half of the Washington-Virginia League series by the Arlington Maccabees, meets its old rival again tonight at the Ballston Softball Stadium at 8 p. m., beginning the second half of the series.

Palace batteries will be Lefty McIntyre and Jimmy Schwab against the Maccabees' Lanny Birch and Shepherd.

All team managers are asked to have their players' contracts in the league president's hands by game time tonight.

Desires Opponent

The Anacostia A. C. wants a game with an unlimited team for Sunday afternoon on its own diamond. Call Atlantic 8621-W.

The Anacostia manager is anxious to talk to the manager of the Bethesda A. C., and wishes him to call at the same number.

Mrs. Herbert, Miss Moore Lead at Net

In the language of current war communiques, yesterday's matches in the women's District of Columbia tennis championships at Columbia Country Club proceeded according to schedule.

Top-seeded Margo Lee Mahoney, second-seeded Willie O'Steen Herbert and unseeded Sara Moore and Dorette Miller advanced in singles, while the two top-ranked doubles combinations moved into the semifinals.

Mrs. Herbert and Miss Moore, the latter a former high-ranking local player who this season is making a comeback after a year's absence, outdistanced other rivals by reaching the singles semifinals. Mrs. Herbert defeated Hazel Bishopp, No. 9 ranking District player, 6—2, 6—2, and Miss Moore beat Mrs. R. W. Wilson, 6—2, 6—0. Mrs. Mahoney, eliminating LaJeanne Echols, and Mrs. Miller, disposing of Eleanor Voith, 6-3, 7—9, 9—7, both moved into the quarter-finals.

In doubles, top-seeded Mrs. Mahony and Mrs. Herbert subdued Charlotte Decker and Miss Bishopp, 6—2, 6—1, and second-ranked Frances Sturtevant and Jane Wilmerding defeated Margaret Graham and Edna Vest, 6—3, 6—2.

Today's schedule lists two singles quarter-finals, among Mrs. Mahony and Frances Rowan at 3 p. m., and Miss Decker and Mrs. Miller at 5:30. Also on the program are quarter-final doubles among Miss Moore and Mrs. Fishburne at 5:30, and Peggy Smith and Mrs. Rowan at 6:30.

Consolation singles will begin today, and all players who were defeated in their first-round singles match are asked to be on hand ready to play.

Deadline Tonight For Baltimore Open

Tonight at 6 o'clock is the entry deadline for the Baltimore Open, honoring Jimmy Roche, which will be played next Monday over the Elkridge Course where Roche has served as professional for 30-odd years.

Charley Betschler is accepting entries at the Hillendale Club until 6 p. m. The fee is $5 for pros and $3 for amateurs. The purse will be $100 added. No post entries will be accepted.

Several pros and amateurs, among them Bob Barnett, Lewis Worsham, Leo Walper and Charley Malone, will pass up the Roche event for a tournament over the famed Pine Valley course the same day. The Baltimore Open field will be one of the largest in this section in years, however.

Palisades Softball Team Beats Brookmonts

Behind the seven-hit pitching of Bobby Thompson, the Palisades softball team defeated the Brookmonts, 6-5, yesterday in the Twilight League on the Palisades Park field when Tom Lannane drove in the tying and winning runs with a single in the seventh inning.

The winners will meet the Georgetown Softies today in a game scheduled for the Georgetown playground.

87-Pound 'Canoe' Is Not a Canoe, Say Race Rivals

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, July 9.—Acquiescing to requests of other contestants in the Paul Bunyan Canoe Derby, the executive board of the Minneapolis Aquatennial today voted to name a committee to rule on claims that the boat used by Howie Oslund and Bob Robinson, of Chicago, current leaders, is not a canoe.

Eighteen of the 19 remaining teams in the derby protested against the craft, constructed of plywood and weighing 87 pounds. The executive board said it planned to have the special committee report Monday, when the race ends.

The Chicagoans, maintaining their lead through today's lap into Aitkin, claimed their method of paddling, not their boat, was responsible for their edge. They paddle from a kneeling rather than a sitting position.

Redskins Ten, Alexandria J. C. to Play

The Washington Redskins will desert their football role tonight at the Alexandria Municipal Stadium when they meet the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce in a softball game for the benefit of the United Service Organization.

For the Redskins, Mickey Parks will be at first base, Bon Bomba catcher, Frank Filchock at third, Andy Farkas at shortfield, Bob Masterson at shortstop, Fred Davis at left field, Bill Young at right field, Vic Carroll at second and Syd Carroll at center field. Clem Strakla, Curtis Dennis and Al Costello will also appear.

Columbus Show Prize List Announced

Prize lists for the Columbus Horse Show, to be held at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club August 2 and 3, arrived in exhibitors' morning mail yesterday with one important addition to previous years—a championship for green or novice mounts.

The new division is made up of four classes and is expected to attract a long list of Virginia and Maryland entries, as the show circuit is currently developing top 3-year-olds on all sides.

Skyscraper Featured

G. M. Carnochan, of New York; Otto Furr, of Middleburg, Va., and Ray H. Norton, of Washington, will judge hunters and Lieut. Col. James T. Duke and Frank B. O'Mahoney will score open jumpers.

Of chief importance to local exhibitors is the open jumping division, in which fences have often gone to the 6-foot mark in past years. Six classes have been arranged for the stratosphere brigade, headed by the skyscraper event.

Bareback Comedy

Among the conformation mounts, the committee expects entries from as far afield as New York and Connecticut, in addition to the customary stables from the vicinity of the District. There are eight classes in which points count toward the hunter championship.

As an added feature, Secretary Vincent P. Lester plans a bareback comic costume class, to be shown over 3½-foot fences. Members of the younger generation, never able to resist a costume class, are already plotting unusual ensembles for the event, attempting to rival in ingenuity Fred Hughes, jr.'s entry two years ago, when he painted white stripes on his Black Caddy and masqueraded as a Zulu warrior.

Weak-Hitting Chisox Seen as Cure for Nats' Losing Streak

Griffs Seek 1st Victory In 8 Games

Crack Pitchers Set For 3-Game Series With Sox; Griffs' Batting Is Weak

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, Ill, July 9.—Here in Chicago where the Nats broke a 12-game losing streak last month they will try to repeat in a mild sort of way. They now have a seven-game losing streak they'd like to get rid of tomorrow night, again with the help of the White Sox. There's a fair chance that the Nats might terminate their losing streak here, because the White Sox can't hit much, either. In fact the White Sox are not hitting the ball as hard as the Nats these days, which is almost the worst thing that might be said about a club in power.

Only one member of the White Sox is hitting as much as .300 and he is hitting that figure right on the nose at .300 even. He is Shortstop Luke Appling, and what with his twisted knee he isn't in the White Sox line-up these days. Taft Wright, at .295, is Chicago's second leading hitter.

The Nats have bogged down pretty horribly at the plate. At least five of their seven straight lickings can be traced to the lack of a punch. There were times when a rousing Washington batting rally was composed of a base on balls, a wild pitch and a run that scored while somebody was hitting into a double play.

Only Three Hitting Well

Bucky Harris is strictly up against it when Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis and Doc Cramer are not getting on base or driving runs home. The others of his cast—George Case, Jimmy Bloodworth, Mickey Vernon, George Archie, Jake Early—have slowed to a whisper with their hitting. Harris' pitchers have been doing a fair job of it, but they have been carrying an enormous load.

What will happen to the Nats in early August when Buddy Lewis betakes himself to an Army camp is something that Harris has reason to shudder about. His only available outfield replacements are Johnny Welaj and Sammy West, who are not the type to excite the imagination except in a dreary sort of way. West, still a fine ball player, is now handicapped by a recent appendix operation.

President Clark Griffith, who was at Detroit this week for the All-Star game, offered little encouragement in the form of prospective new players. He may bring up Hillis Layne, sensational infielder now with Chattanooga, but the latter club is in the Southern Association pennant fight and the town might resent it. Layne is banging the ball for a sweet .393 average and is recommended as a swell second baseman.

Pitching Improved

Aside from the failure of Dutch Leonard to regain his consistency of two seasons ago, the Nats' pitching has been distinctly on the improve. In three starts, Bill Zuber has demonstrated that he can pitch winning ball, although he has won only one game. His wildness, which had troubled him in three previous seasons in the majors, Zuber seems to have brought under fair control.

Tomorrow night under the lights of Comiskey Park, Harris will send Ken Chase at the White Sox in the series opener. Ordinarily, Leonard would be due to pitch, but Chase has complained that he suffers from too much rest. After a dismal early season, Chase three weeks ago recovered his fine pitching edge, and Harris is eager to work him in turn in an effort to keep him keen.

Sid Hudson, who worked only one inning in the All-Star game after more than a week's rest, will also be available for the series here as will Leonard. When the Nats reassemble here tomorrow they will be coming off a four-day vacation from their latest losing streak.

Coleman Meets Dusek Tonight At Turner's

Whether Abie Coleman, the little guy with the Joe Louis punch and the Hackenschmidt wrestling power, will remain as a headliner will be determined tonight when the Polish midget goes against Ernie Dusek, the "Riot Squad" terror, in the feature bout at Turner's Arena.

Coleman already has disposed of five straight—Angelo Leone, Jim Austeri, Lou Plummer, the Green Hornet and Milo Steinborn. He can keep on headlining the show as long as he keeps on winning, but a defeat for Abie tonight is expected to find him relegated to the lower ranks, depending, of course, on how Coleman handles himself.

The "Coleman clutch," which gradually is eclipsing the famous "cobra clutch" which Nanjo Singh, the Hindu, used to pack 'em in two summers ago, is Abie's chief weapon. This hold has enabled Coleman to win five of the six matches, and pave the way for his sixth victory, the one over Steinborn.

But tonight Coleman will be up against a power-house grappler in Dusek, who is sometimes referred to as the "uncrowned champion." Ernie has a few tricks to spring, and may lay Abie out early in the fray.

The semiwindup will be between Wladislaw Talun, 6-foot 8-inch, 305-pound Polish protege of former champion Waldek Zybsko and The Green Hornet, masked madman. Talun, who will be seconded by Zybsko, winner over Andy Meixner recently.

In a two-man team bout Eddie Newman and Angelo Leone, couple of villains, will attempt to tear apart the duo of Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman. Opening the show at 8:30 will be a bout between Hans Kampfer and Fred (Legs) Grobmier.

Pigeon Racing Potentates—No. 3

'Novice' Good Wins Speed Prize

Lon Jenkins Named No. 1 D. C. Bowler

Lou Jenkins, the fire-ball bowler of the Clarendon District League team, was named the District's first ranking bowler by a unanimous vote of the Washington City Duckpin Association executives in the annual meeting last night. Secretary Ben McAlwee made the announcement.

Jenkins succeeds Astor Clarke, who led the list the six previous years. Clarke forfeited his rights to the post as he did not compete in the required number of games. Hokie Smith, Tony Santini and Ollie Pacini were not ranked for the same reason.

Perce Wolfe and Ed Blakeney shared the second position, Wolfe receiving four second-place votes, one third and one sixth while Blakeney was given one second-place ballot and five third. They received 49 points each, compared to a perfect 60 to Jenkins.

The next spot was also a deadlock, Milton Walker and Cletus Pannell receiving 37 points each. Next in order came, sixth, Bill Krauss; seventh, Paul Jarman; eighth, Ed Nash; ninth, Ernie Hauser, and tenth, El Geib.

Miss Pettit Is High

"Boots" Pettit's 342 was top set for the women of the Vegetable Mixed League, at Silver Spring, with George Allen topping the men with a 142 single as Al Masson's 393 led for set and enabled his Yams team to take all three tilts from the Radishes. Manager Earle Stocking also contributed a 359 count to help the Yams. The Peas and Yams divided team highs with 460 and 1,308, respectively, with the latter going into first place by a one-game margin over the former.

Wright Tops Arlington

The Arlington Summer Commercial League was paced by Al Wright with his 161-437 which enabled the K. K. V. quintet to win high team set after a 1,591 count. The league-leading Arlington Juniors rolled top game of 569.

Heft, D. C. Pitcher, Has Good Record With Owensboro

Arnold Heft, former Central High School pitching star, is going great guns with Owensboro, Ky., of the Kitty League. Though his club is in sixth place, Heft has won 10 and lost 5 and is leading the circuit in strikeouts with 125.

Statistics reveal that he has pitched the most innings of any league hurler, 126, while giving 93 hits, 46 runs, of which but 25 were earned, and has issued 53 walks. He started 12 games and finished 10. On the strength of his record he has been chosen as one of the three pitchers on the league all-star team.

Pacini's 453 Leads Pin Mixed Doubles

Ollie Pacini, the old master and manager of Northeast Temple, was true to form last night in the Wenesday Night Mixed Doubles League and came through with high single of 152 which he turned into a 433 set, topping the season high of 391, which Frank Mischou posted several weeks ago.

Tosses Pet Out of Window to Prove Homing Instinct

Just to prove his point, Paul L. Good tossed his favorite homing pigeon out of a fifth-floor window of The Post, nearly giving a Post photographer apoplexy.

Good's point was to prove to a gathering of skeptics that the bird would head for his home in Colmar Manor, Md., and Good's confidence was well placed—the bird which got the "pitch" was instrumental in his winning the best average speed diploma in the Aero Pigeon Racing Club's recently completed "old bird" racing series.

Good, a comparative novice at the intricate business of breeding and training the birds which are so valuable to military intelligence in wartime, only three years ago took up the hobby of racing pigeons.

Good's loft of 225 birds sent only 13 entries out for the 9-race series, but the speedsters averaged a speed of 1,026.79 yards per minute—roughly 40 miles per hour.

No. 437, Good's best flyer and the one he tossed from the window of The Post, was clocked at 60 miles per hour for 300 miles in a 1940 race from Akron, Ohio. No. 437 this year placed second in both 500-mile races from Nappanee, Ind., to Washington. The Post photographer who photographed Good and his prize-winner thought the bird was escaping when its owner casually pitched it out the window and made a gallant attempt to retrieve the speedster.

"Oh, that's all right, he's found his way home from Chicago twice this year in 110-degree heat," said Good nonchalantly. And yesterday No. 437 was just as nonchalantly lapping up seed at his perch in the rear of 616 Ashton street in Colmar Manor.

Kavakos Tops Yellow Cab, 1-0, In Softball

Kavakos Grill started second-half play in the Capital City League last night at Washington Softball Stadium by defeating Yellow Cab in one of the best games of the season, 1-0, in eight rapid innings.

Paul Grace, on the mound for Kavakos, granted the Cabbies but one hit, a triple by Danny Bock with two out in the seventh.

Kavakos scored the winning run in the eighth when Ray Grace, brother of the hurler, singled and advanced when Chrisafulli walked. Grace was forced at third on Quill's attempted sacrifice but "Whitey" Lee came through with a single to left that scored Chrisafulli with the only run of the ball game.

Milt Hoffman, Census hurler, fanned 14 men in five and one-third innings but suddenly lost control and walked five and gave up a two-run single that enabled Civil Service to tally six times in the sixth and take a 7-4 victory in the National Night League. Joe Martz gave seven scattered hits for Civil Service.

Phils Rout 44th Division At Ft. Dix, 15-0

By the Associated Press

Fort Dix, N. J., July 9.—The National League Phillies jumped all over the Forty-fourth Division's baseball team today, pouring on a 15-to-0 defeat before a crowd of 10,000 soldiers and civilians.

It marked the first time a major league team has played in an Army camp since the Selective Service law went into effect and the Phils made the most of their debut. They rammed out 18 hits, including home run blasts by Nick Etten and Danny Murtaugh, while the soldiers could get only four safeties off the combined pitching of Rube Melton, Bill Harman, Johnny Podgajny and Lee Grissom.

The National League cellar-dwellers exploded seven runs in the eighth inning—a new high for them this season.

Manager Doc Prothro felt so good he took over third base himself in the last half of the seventh for the duration. He fanned once, popped out his other time at bat, had an assist and committed an error.

Two Globisch Sisters Enter Swim Meet

Manager Hardy Pearce, of the Airport Pool, announced last night that he had received the entry of the famous Globisch sisters, Pauline and Marilyn, for the fourth annual Washington Airport swim meet Monday evening.

Representing the Hershey (P.) Athletic Club, the Globisch sisters lend national luster to the breaststroke event. Marilyn, the elder of the pair, holds several Middle Atlantic records in the breaststroke and bids fair to add to her laurels next Monday evening.

Both Marilyn and Pauline have swum in top flight competition for the past four years, appearing here last year in the President's Cup Regatta swimming meet and the Airport meet, in which Marilyn finished a close second to Lorraine Fischer, whose entry appears certain.

Central Pennsylvania, aside from the Globisch entries, also will be represented by a contingent of 18 female swimmers from the Lancaster Swimming Association.

Still another topnotch entry was received yesterday when Jean Ort signed up for the 60-yard free style. Former captain of the Penn Hall School for Girls in Chambersburg, Pa., Miss Ort is expected to wage a hot duel with the Shoreham's Patsy Palmer for top honors in this event.

Miss Ort, whose father is a naval officer recently assigned to Washington, holds virtually the entire repertoire of Penn Hall records.

Judith Auritt Enters

Still another nationally famous swimmer entered the free style when Judith Auritt, of Lancaster (Pa.) A. C., cast her lot with the already star-laden field. Miss Auritt holds the junior 440-yard free-style championship of the United States in addition to the Middle Atlantic 220-yard free style.

A fellow entry from Lancaster will be Doris Cant, Middle Atlantic backstroke champion. Miss Cant, formerly of Dayton, appeared here last year in the East Potomac meet in which she finished second in the backstroke.

The Baltimore Knights of Columbus entered a contingent of 15, while the Washington Golf and Country Club entered 12. Washington Golf and Country will not be represented by Bill Wright this year, as the star free styler is currently in Michigan, but the Virginians will have Gordon Mustin, who pressed Wright in most of his races last year.

Joe Louis' Wife Can't Believe His Charges

Boxer's Attorneys Deny She Has Been 'True and Virtuous'

By International News Service

Chicago, July 9.—Voicing unbelief, Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis could have made all the charges accredited to him in his reply to her divorce suit, Marva Trotter Louis tonight announced she intended to have a conference with the Brown Bomber on his arrival in Chicago, which she expected shortly.

Louis' attorneys filed an answer in Circuit Court today to her recent suit, asking its dismissal and charging Marva, known as a beauty in Chicago's South Side Negro section, with failure to treat the champion "kindly and affectionately" or to conduct herself as a "true and virtuous wife."

"Oh, that isn't true," Marva said. "I can't believe that Joe said it. His managers must have drawn that answer for him. He has been in Detroit and his attorney has been here all the time.

"I don't expect to do anything about his answer, or to make any decisions on the future, either about my suit or possible settlements, until I see Joe."

Joe in answer to his wife's suit denied flatly that he ever had hit her, as she charged he did on two occasions, or that he had stepped on her ankle which she asserted he did last April 19, the date when she said she was compelled to leave him.

MARVA LOUIS

He declared she greatly had magnified his income and his fortune, and then detailed the gifts he had made to her during their married life.

His wife's estimate of $400,000 as the worth of his Chicago and Detroit real estate holdings, another $400,000 as his annuities, and $250,000 as his average annual income all were exaggerated, Joe claimed.

The answer interpolated a denial that Louis "ever stated to his wife or intimated to anyone that he did not want a child or children."

She Wants to Talk With Joe Before Filing Answer

No statement of this sort was made in his wife's suit and those familiar with the case said this paragraph might have been in answer to rumors springing up after Marva's divorce suit was filed.

As to his treatment of his wife, the big fighter claimed he gave her a new automobile every year, sometimes two; that she received a $100 a week allowance, plus $300 income monthly from the $20,000 apartment building he gave her, that he showered her with frequent gifts of money, ranging from $500 to $5,000, in addition to her allowance.

There was no elaboration of his charge that Marva had not conducted herself as a "true and virtuous wife." The only admission Joe made to the statements contained in his wife's complaint was that:

"The defendant proudly admits that he is heavyweight champion."

Evert Tennis Victor Over Gordon Best

Philadelphia, July 9 (AP).—Form held true in the National Interscholastic Tennis Tournament today. All eight seeded players advanced easily to the third round.

James Evert of Chicago, seeded No. 2, provided the most dazzling display of the second round when he overwhelmed Gordon Best, of Corpus Christi, Tex., 6—0, 6—1. Evert, national junior indoor champion, set himself up as a stronger threat to top-seeded Victor Seixas of Philadelphia, in brushing aside the Texan in record time.

Seixas and Blair Hawley of Exeter, N. H., gained the third round by default.

Randall Clark, Jr., of Tulsa, Okla., was the only seeded star to be pressed in the second round action and he was carried three sets by rank Whaley, Corpus Christi. Clark dropped the first set, 4—6, but rallied to take the next two, 6—3, 6—3.

Bill Vogt, of Pottstown, Pa., completed the elimination of the California entries when he downed Tom Falkenberg, Los Angeles, 7—5, 6—4. Reggie Cooper, Washington, D. C., scored an impressive victory when he took out Morton Stern, of Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—0.

Jockey Scocca Pilots Palkin to Hagerstown Race Victory

Morocco D. Runs Second; Pomary, 3d

Winner Pays $17.50; 6,000 Fans on Hand For Race Program; Double Returns $129

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 9.—Danny Scocca, of Washington, D. C., who graduated from Eastern High School into the jockey profession, gave an excellent exhibition of saddle work today to win the Station WJEJ Purse with J. E. Murphy's Palkin. Going a mile and a sixteenth, Scocca judged the ride perfectly and then brought the 5-year-old daughter of Ladkin to the top where she finished a length and a quarter in advance of Mrs. G. C. Rollings' Morocco D. Five lengths farther back came Mrs. H. S. Horkheimers' Pomary, the pacemaker most of the way, to be third in a limit field of eight.

As was the case in most races during the afternoon, the WJEJ Purse went to a long shot for Palkin carried a price tag of $17.50. She was clocked for the route in 1:52 over a track that became fast today under a warm sun. A crowd of 6,000 saw the program.

Pomary was hustled to the front by Jockey Butsy Hernandez and opened three lengths on Palkin in the first quarter mile. Scocca, however, wisely steadied the mare and bided his time. After a half, the Washington boy put Palkin to a drive and she wore down Pomary to get to the top.

Then Morocco D., roused by Jockey Carson Kirk, rallied to loom menacingly.

The daily double returned $129.70 for the usual deuce investment. Mrs. H. J. Mohr's Abbots Chant supplied the start of the twin transaction by galloping along six lengths ahead of the closest opposition in the first race. Good Grass and Sun Maker followed her over the line. Abbots Chant paid $19 in her own right, under a good ride by Jockey D. West. J. F. Donaldson's Cautious Bo came from far back to win the second race, saving much ground and scoring by a length and a half over Chancer. Third money went to Questre. Jockey Skeets Holland was aboard the $8.60 shot.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABBOTS CHANT, $19.00, $11.10, $5.30; GOOD GRASS, $6.30, $4.40; SUN MAKER, $2.80.

ABBOTS CHANT disposed of GOOD GRASS to take command and drew out to win with speed in reserve. GOOD GRASS was hard ridden, was no match for the winner, but was best of the others. SUN MAKER lost ground early and showed an even effort. MATHORA was well placed early and weakened. WALTER HAIGHT had no excuses.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 2:56. Winner, J. F. Donaldson's ch. g. (9), by Botanical—Cautious. Trained by M. Johnson. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:24.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAUTIOUS BO, $8.60, $4.60, $3.20; CHANCER, $8.80, $5.80; QUESTRE, $4.20.

CAUTIOUS BO, confidently handled early, saved much ground while improving his position and drew clear under a drive in the closing test. CHANCER was hard ridden while closest to QUESTRE'S pace and closed with good energy. QUESTRE set a good pace and weakened after being displaced.

Daily Double—ABBOTS CHANT and CAUTIOUS BO Paid $129.70.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:20½. Off at 3:21½. Winner, Q. Scialpi's br. f. (3), by Twink—Alicia W. Trained by E. Heubeck, Jr. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:22⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLICK, $27.40, $9.70, $5.00; STOCKTON, $6.60, $4.40; PHALARIS GIRL, $3.80.

FLICK, first away, opened a commanding lead and was under a hand drive at the end. STOCKTON could not keep up early and closed with good energy, but was no match for the winner. PHALARIS GIRL was hard urged early to hold a forward position and was tiring at the end. TAR ANNE was shut off repeatedly early and was a beaten-off fourth.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:47. Winner, W. Strawbridge's ro. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAEME CRACKER, $8.90, $5.20, $4.40; REMOLEE, $5.60, $3.10; MY FIRST, $4.70.

GRAEME CRACKER worked her way to contention on the outside, responded when shaken up and wore down REMOLEE for the photo decision. REMOLEE disposed of MY FIRST to take command and just missed staying while under pressure. MY FIRST set the early pace and weakened. SUMMER HAIL showed a fair effort.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:17. Off at 4:17. Winner, Mrs. A. B. Bowman's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRAINCHILD, $23.60, $9.70, $6.50; LEONARDTOWN, $7.20, $5.20; KENNER, $4.20.

BRAINCHILD, always well placed, shook off KENNER to take command and drew out, but had to be kept to pressure to stave off LEONARDTOWN. The latter lost ground while trailing, came to the outside and closed with a bold rush to be going fastest of all. KENNER raced SMALL CHANGE into defeat to take command and tired in the final stages. SMALL CHANGE had good early speed and weakened.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:43½. Off at 4:45. Winner, J. E. Murphy's ch. m. †Pulled up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PALKIN, $17.50, $5.50, $3.50; MOROCCO D., $4.60, $3.10; POMARY, $3.90.

PALKIN, rated while closest to the pace of POMARY, took command when placed to a drive and held sway thereafter under strong handling. MOROCCO D. improved his position boldly and then hung in the final stages. POMARY set a strong early pace and weakened after being displaced. SUMMER STOCK was well placed early and tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:12. Off at 5:12½. Winner, J. L. Garthright's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WORTHOWNING, $15.10, $6.40, $4.10; JUSTA JIMMIE, $5.70, $3.70; WAR RUMOR, $3.10.

WORTHOWNING displaced JUSTA JIMMIE to take command, drew out and won with speed in reserve. JUSTA JIMMIE saved ground under hard handling and was weakening at the close. WAR RUMOR was well placed throughout and closed willingly. EXTRA GOOD was not a serious factor at any stage.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:38. Off at 5:38½. Winner, E. H. Franklin's b. g. †Won but was disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAND ALONE, $12.70, $6.10, $5.20; LYDE, $5.90, $3.70; PAMUNKEY, $3.90.

SHORTS shut off MAETAKE when taking command early, withstood challenges of LYDE and carried STAND ALONE out entering the stretch, for which he was disqualified. STAND ALONE, outrun early, came to the outside to improve his position and was closing gamely when impeded. LYDE forced the pace in the early stages and weakened in the final test. PAMUNKEY went evenly and was not a serious factor. PASCUA was never close.

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al:

Jockeys here are getting increased fees along with the increased purses. They get $10 a mount and $20 for a winner. It is reported that Sammy Palumbo took a vacation because he thought the riders would get $5 a mount. With the ante raised, Palumbo may return to ride here next week. Jockey G. Acosta, who rode well during the early stages of the Charles Town meeting, arrived from the Middle West yesterday and swung into action. Dr. and Mrs. Paul Miller, ardent race fans from Eirchsville, Ohio, were visitors. Danny and Agnes Scocca, a slim couple, insist on fattening me up every time I visit them. Jockey Willie Dufford drew a five-day suspension here Tuesday for carelessness. He apparently thought the race was over the first time around and pulled up on Peppery, thereby losing a chance to beat Nick. Jockey Skeets Holland got three days on the ground for cutting across too sharply with Sky Hostess on the same program. Well, Walter Haight, the colt, showed some improvement. He beat three horses yesterday. The track crew, aided, by a hard-working sun, did a good job in getting the oval in shape. Hagerstown is a beehive of activities these days. Factories are working day and night and the Fairchild plant is turning out three airplanes a day and expects to make it six a day before the winter sets in. Charlie Schwartz, proprietor of the Airport Inn, tossed a party for the visiting press last night with Dave Steiner doing an excellent job of batting for Tubby Rives as M. C. After keeping away from racing for a year, J. B. Belk, of Charlottesville, Va., is back. He has a powerful stable here. Outrider Happy Gordon, tossed by his mount opening day, showed up yesterday with a new animay, a beautiful gray job. The Maryland Racing Commission means business on that three-hour limit for the eight-race card. I always thought the law read "Between sunrise and sunset." See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—MYRTLE M. was a winner at Charles Town, and seems well placed in this field. ROLLS ROUGH has plenty of speed and is dangerous. HI TOOTS has been racing greenly and may show improvement today.

Second race—MARDI GRAS had plenty of foot at Delaware Park and appears to be the solid horse in this group. PLEASANT LADY and BEACON QUEEN were both disqualified after winning efforts at the West Virginia track.

THIRD RACE—JAMES PAL appears ready to carry 118 pounds and hang defeat on this gang. Needs only the right handling. GOANTELL was a tough one at the other town and is dangerous. Early speed makes CUT EMERALD a threat.

Fourth race—GLITTER GIRL breaks off the rail and has the speed to get to the top. Looks like the day's best bet. PANDORAMINT has plenty of foot, but may need mud. BERWYN would be a threat but is a doubtful starter.

Fifth race—WALTER LIGHT was a winner at Delaware Park, and seems to have an edge on this field. KAI-MIN was a champion at Charles Town and is dangerous. NICK won his last over this track

Peoples Drug Sales Up 14% In Six Months

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., and subsidiary corporations yesterday reported net sales in June totaled $2,140,243, an increase of 14.5 per cent as compared with $1,869,094 in the same month last year.

Cumulative sales in the first six months were $12,765,604, up 14.1 per cent as compared with $11,184,844 in the corresponding 1940 period.

Treasurer W. H. Churchill pointed out that sales figures are reported without taking into consideration any change in number of stores.

Local Bank Dividends

Directors of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. have declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on capital stock, payable August 1 to holders of record July 21. President Harry G. Meem reported yesterday that the trust company's deposits and assets on June 30 were the highest in its history.

Directors of the National Savings & Trust Co. have declared a dividend of $1 a share, payable August 1 to holders of record July 23.

New Treasury Issue

The Treasury announced yesterday that it would sell $200,000,000 of Commodity Credit Corporation notes to raise funds for the corporation.

At the same time, new Commodity Credit notes will be offered in exchange for $203,000,000 of old Commodity Credit notes coming due for payment August 1. The new notes will bear 1⅛ per cent interest and will mature February 15, 1945.

Will Attend Rail Parley

Three Washington men will take a prominent part in the program of the annual convention of the purchases and stores division of the Association of American Railroads in Chicago on Thursday and Friday. They are Charles H. Buford, vice president of the operations and maintenance department of the A. A. R.; W. J. Farrell, secretary of the Purchases and Stores Division, and C. B. Neubauer, assistant to the vice president of the Southern Railway System.

Mr. Buford will speak at the opening session of the convention, and Mr. Farrell will give the report of the general committee. Mr. Neubauer is a member of the division's general committee.

Advertising Up 4.5 Per Cent

Advertising placed by retail merchants in newspapers during the first six months of this year aggregated 4.5 per cent more than was used during the first six months of last year, according to Advertising Age.

Basing its findings on retail advertising reports covering all of the newspapers in 83 major cities, the publication reveals that retail advertising during the first six months of 1941 was up 22,866,338 lines in these cities, compared with last year. The total for 1941 was 532,263,182 lines, and for 1940 510,396,844 lines.

For the last week of the period—that ended June 28—retail advertising volume in the 83 measured cities showed an increase of 4.3 per cent over the corresponding 1940 week.

Textile Institute Head Criticizes U. S. Price Fixing

New York, July 9 (AP).—Claudius Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, today sharply criticized the Federal Government's price fixing policies and urged changes in price fixing procedure.

In a letter to members regarding the Government policies in the textile industry he recommended:

1. That present price ceilings should be rescinded or revised.

2. That there be established a permanent and more orderly and democratic method of price determination.

3. That the cotton textile industry for its self-protection should formulate "its own views as to the methods and principles which should shape new price control legislation, if it is resorted to" by the Government.

Late Profit-taking Washes Out Advance In Second Consecutive Million-Share Day

New York, July 9.—The stock market for a time today gave promise of outstripping its bullish performance of Tuesday but failed because late profit selling washed out many of the earlier gains.

Its principal achievement was in recording the second million-share turnover this year and also the second largest.

An active opening brought fairly general advances of moderate proportions. Fresh buying, apparently inspired by the contrassasonal revival of speculative interest, widened the initial rises and at the best favored issues were ahead major fractions to a point or more.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 43.2. Volume was 1,007,184 shares against Tuesday's 1941 record high of 1,387,673.

Board room sentiment most of the day continued colored by inflation discussion and Russian claims that German forces had been thrown back heavily on a number of fronts. Also regarded as helpful to the cause of Great Britain and her Allies was a report that Syria had sounded out London on an armistice.

Weighing somewhat against the market's position, finally, however, was the judgment of many of its followers that the relatively fast upturn Monday and Tuesday invited some lightening of commitments.

Higher in the stock list were Bethlehem Steel, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Eastman and United Aircraft. Standard Oil (New Jersey), Texas Corporation and U. S. Rubber reached new highs for the year. Woolworth dropped more than 2 points on a cut in the dividend rate to 40 cents from 60 cents paid in previous quarters. American Telephone also backed down about 2 after announcement of stock conversion terms for the proposed new issue of $233,584,900 debentures.

In the Curb higher marks were posted for Aluminum Co., Bell Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal and Humble Oil. Transfers here were around 168,000 shares against 196,000 yesterday.

The bond market remained in a climbing mood today with rails again in leadership.

The third successive day of rising prices for rails brought the inevitable profit taking late in the session, however, and the day's best gains of fractions to around 2 points were shaved about half in some cases and in a few converted into minor losses.

The Associated Press average of 10 foreign bonds moved into new high ground for the year at 47.9, up .3 of a point. The rails wound up with a net gain of .1 of a point at 65.1 after rising to 65.2 at noon. Other groups in the index were only slightly changed.

Among loans holding on to most of the day's improvement were Baltimore & Ohio 4s at 63¾, Boston & Maine 4s at 69½, Erie convertible 4s at 54¾, Laclede Gas 5½s at 71, Allegheny 5s at 77, Great Northern 4s at 102 and Western Maryland 4s at 94.

Government bonds ended about unchanged on the Stock Exchange with sales negligible. Prices for some Treasury maturities stiffened a bit over the counter and trading was more active.

Further Storage Of Wheat Refused At Kansas City

Kansas City, July 9 (AP).—The Kansas City Board of Trade ruled today that effective at once it could accept no more wheat for storage or loan purposes because of lack of space. Grain shipped for immediate sale is not affected.

W. R. Scott, secretary of the board, said public elevators and other storage bins now were holding approximately 33,350,000 bushels and that the 888 cars of wheat received today would bring the total to within 2,000,000 bushels of all the space available here.

The continuous flow of new wheat into the market the last three weeks on top of a heavy carryover from last year brought about the bin shortage. Scott estimated that 80 per cent of all wheat received this year was storage bound.

Including today's 888 arrival there are 5,140 cars of wheat, roughly 8,500,000 bushels, awaiting unloading.

Jobless Aid Fund Now at 2.3 Billions

Deposits by States in the Treasury's Unemployment Trust Fund last fiscal year totaled $892,023,224 and withdrawals $433,242,840. On June 30, the fund contained approximately $2,300,000,000—nearly all invested in Federal securities.

Commodities Turn Uneven After Upswing

By the Associated Press

The upswing in commodity prices tapered off to some extent yesterday, cotton closing considerably under its peeak at advances of 35 to 50 cents a bale and cottonseed oil, which has been bounding daily, closing nearly half a cent a pound under its previous level.

Closing prices were mixed. Santos coffee gaining 1-4 cent or more a pound, cocoa closing 1-10 cent down and world sugar futures adding 2 1-3 to 3 1-2 points.

Silk futures turned down 1 1-2 to 3 cents a pound on an easier Yokohama bourse, selling and realizing, despite worry over the Far Eastern situation.

New York hide prices slipped .06 to .10 cent a pound, wool tops were .1 cent a pound lower to .3 higher.

The feeble rubber and copper markets were unchanged to .10 cent a pound higher, while lead ranged unchanged to .05 cent a pound lower.

The Associated Press index of 35 wholesale staples advanced to a new high 1941 high of 89.46 per cent of the 1926 averages from 89.35 the day before.

Wheat Also Falters

Chicago, July 9 (AP).—Wheat futures which yesterday established new high record prices for the crop year, faltered today under pressure of profit taking, some hedge selling and weakness of surrounding commodities.

The market was lower from the start but the worst breaks came in the final quarter hour when the July delivery extended the net losses for the day to 1¾ cents a bushel. Soybeans and lard also broke sharply in sympathy with cottonseed oil, although live hogs and cotton were higher. Final prices of all commodities here were at or near the day's lowest levels.

Wheat futures closed 1⅞-1¾ cents a bushel under the final quotations of Tuesday, July 1.05⅛@1.05¾. September 1.06⅝@1.06¾, corn was ⅛-⅛ lower, July 74½; September 76⅛@76⅛; oats were ¼ to ⅜ down; rye declined ½-⅝; soybeans were 2¾-3 cents off, and lard lots 17½@25 cents a hundred pounds.

The early break in cottonseed oil futures followed trade reports that the government was planning to place a price ceiling on that commodity below the current market levels. Soybeans and lard backed down in sympathy and carried along other grains. Speculative demand was not aggressive and mill buying soon dried up.

Wool Labeling Law to Upset Merchandising

By the Associated Press

New York, July 8.—Many retailers expect the Federal Wool Products Labeling Act to cause numerous changes in merchandising when it goes into effect July 14.

The new law requires that any product which contains wool, except carpets, rugs, mats and upholstery fabrics, must bear a label which reveals the percentages of "wool," "reprocessed wool" and "reused wool."

The first classification covers new wool never before been made up into woven or felted merchandise. Reprocessed wool is material which has been woven or felted without ever having been used by the consumer, while re-used wool means fabric which has been used by the consumer and then been reduced to a fibrous state and again made into some wool product.

Since not enough wool is produced to make all things that the consumer needs, about 25 per cent of that used is reprocessed or reused wool. In the course of a year, it is estimated by the Textile Economics Bureau, 265,000,000 pounds of new or virgin wool is used, compared with 10,000,000 pounds of reprocessed wool and 75,000,000 pounds of re-used fabric.

Wool merchandisers fought the legislation for more than 20 years, saying they felt the labels would be more confusing than helpful. Today they have embarked on a campaign for the education of consumers concerning the meaning and importance of the labeling.

In a survey conducted by the National Retail Dry Goods Association among retailers only 29 per cent believed that purchases of wool merchandise would be influenced more by the information on the labels than by price.

The main problem, they felt, was that the labels would not identify the grade of the wool so that it would be conceivable for a high grade of reprocessed or re-used wool to cost more and last longer than a cheaper grade of new wool.

Administration of the Wool Products Labeling Act will be under the supervision of the Federal Trade Commission.

Woolworth Cuts Dividend Rate To 40 Cents

New York, July 9 (AP).—The F. W. Woolworth Co. today reduced its dividends to 40 cents on common stock, a drop from the 60 cents previously paid quarterly.

A statement expressed optimism over improved business but feared uncertainties of increased taxes and the war situation. The dividend is payable September 2 to stockholders of record August 11.

Sales in the United States, Canada and Cuba for the first six months of the year were $12,999,540 bigger than the like period of 1940, an increase of 8.9 per cent, directors reported.

C. S. Woolworth, chairman of the board, and C. W. Deyo, president, in a joint statement said: "The anticipated increase in net earnings from store operations will be adversely affected to some extent by a proposed increase in Federal tax rates and higher Canadian taxes."

Bond Value Mounts $900,000,000 in June

New York, July 9 (AP).—The value of bonds listed in the New York Stock Exchange increased approximately $900,000,000 in June, the exchange announced today.

The 1,278 issues listed on the exchange June 30 had a total market value of $53,237,234,699, or 94.8 per cent of their $56,159,155,232 face value.

A month previous, 1,283 issues had total value of $52,321,710,056, or 94.22 per cent of their $55,533,776,568 face value.

Price Ceiling Modified On Choice Hide Grades

By the Associated Press

Leon Henderson, price administrator, said yesterday that exceptions might be allowed to the schedule of maximum prices on hides for tanners who use only a choice selection in making mechanical, belting and upholstery leathers and other special grades.

He said that dealers making such special selections would have to apply to his office for exemptions.

Henderson also urged that packers continue customary trade practices of selecting and classifying hides and skins before sale. Since the imposition of the price ceiling, he said, there was a "threatened abrogation of the practice of selecting and classifying hides."

Revelle Brown Elected Head Of Lehigh R. R.

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 9.—Revelle W. Brown, who entered the railroad business 40 years ago as a laborer, became president today of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co.

MR. BROWN

He was elected at a special directors' meeting. He takes the place of Albert N. Williams, who resigned to become head of Western Union Telegraph Co.

"There is no man who knows more about the public, the employes and the property," Williams commented in congratulating the new president.

Brown, 57, moves over to the Lehigh Valley from the Reading Co. and Central Railroad of New Jersey. Previously, he had served in various capacities with the Baltimore & Ohio. For six years he has been vice president of the affiliated Reading and Central systems.

The new Lehigh Valley head began his Horatio Alger rise shortly after his graduation from high school in Carlyle, Ill., in 1901. He went to work for the B. & O. that year as a laborer.

Brown remained with the B. & O. until 1930, serving in the Illinois, Toledo, Connellsville and Cumberland divisions.

He joined the Central Railroad of New Jersey as general manager in 1930. A year later he became vice president of that road. In 1935, he was made vice president in charge of operations and maintenance of the Reading Co. and the Central.

In recent months he has been prominent in railroad circles as chairman of a committee named by Eastern railroads to negotiate labor contracts.

New A.T. & T. Issue To Bear 3% Rate

New York, July 9 (AP).—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. directors approved today a rate of 3 per cent interest on $233,584,900 in convertible debentures to be offered stockholders at $100 principal amount for each eight shares of stock held on July 25.

The debentures will be dated Sept. 1 and will mature Sept. 1, 1956, but are convertible into stock at $140 per share between Jan. 1, 1942, and Dec. 31, 1954, on surrender of $100 in debentures and $40 cash for each share. A. T. & T. stock has been selling as much as $18 above that figure.

$700,000,000 Climb Seen in Grain Value

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 9.—American farmers expect to harvest this summer their most valuable crop of grain since 1929.

Statisticians today estimated the prospective domestic yield of the four major cereals—wheat, corn, oats and rye—would be worth at market, based on present Chicago prices, almost $3,300,000,000, or $700,000,000 more than last year.

The valuation of around $3,300,000,000 would be about 32 per cent greater than the worth of these crops in 1939 and almost 38 per cent better than that of 1938 but only 13 per cent ahead of 1937.

Latests estimates of Chicago crop experts indicate the yield of the four cereals will total approximately 4,587,000,000 bushels, or 43,000,000 more than last year and the largest since 1937, when the harvest totaled 4,736,000,000 bushels.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said the national income rose in May to a rate of $86,000,000,000 a year—which would be the highest on record.

The department said its index of income payments to individuals—wages, dividends, royalties, etc.—rose from April to May by the largest margin ever shown in a similar period.

Steel Firm, Army To Remodel Plant For Shell Casings

Pittsburgh, July 9 (AP).—Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, in cooperation with the Federal Government and the army, will remodel the former McKeesport Tinplate Company plant in nearby Port Vue for the production of shell casings, it was announced today.

The tinplate plant, once one of the largest of its kind in the nation, was acquired more than a year ago by J. and L. after the McKeesport firm had announced its intention of abandoning it.

J. and L. spokesman estimated that between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 will be required to recondition the plant and install machinery for the manufacture of 105 and 155 mm. shell casings. He said the production might be started within two or three months.

The government will furnish the money, equipment, and machinery and the company will supply the plant, steel, power, management and personnel. At one time, the plant employed approximately 3,000 in tinplate manufacture.

Slab Zinc Output Decreases in June

New York, July 9 (AP).—Production of domestic slab zinc of all grades totaled 62,236 tons in June, compared with 64,645 in May and 61,213 in June, 1940, the American Zinc Institute reported today.

Shipments for the month amounted to 63,139 tons against 63,604 in May and 53,935 in the 1940 month. Stocks on hand at the beginning of June were 8,327 tons, slightly more than the 7,286 at the beginning of May but far under the 72,629 tons on May 31, 1940, reflecting the high current use of zinc in armament production.

Total shipments included 1,254 tons for export in June and 1,192 for export in May after five months of no exporting of zinc.

Kresge Sales Rise 8% During June

New York, July 9 (AP).—S. S. Kresge Co. reported today June sales of $13,024,585, an increase of 8 per cent over June of 1940, and bringing the 1941 first-half sales to $74,686,025, compared with $68,725,000 in the corresponding period of 1940.

$2,819,000,000 Loan To Defense Plants

Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, disclosed yesterday that $2,819,000,000 has been allocated by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and its subsidiaries for plant expansion, acquisition of critical materials and for working capital for companies engaged in producing defense articles.

A breakdown of the statistics shows that $190,000,000 has been allocated for the building up of rubber stocks; $823,000,000 for critical metals, such as tin, manganese, copper and lead; $110,000,000 for other supplies; $1,752,000,000 for expansion of plants; $94,000,000 in the form of outright loans and the balance for sundry items.

Trinidad Looks More American Than British Now

Port of Spain, Trinidad, July 9 (AP). So many American soldiers are stationed on this British island, so many American ships are anchored in the harbor and so many American laborers are working on the new United States base that Trinidad today looks almost more American than British.

This is one of the bases acquired in the trade for 50 destroyers.

In fact, many restaurants, movies and shops have changed their signs to include the word "American" in the firm name.

"First we were a Spanish colony, then French, then British," a native shopkeeper said. "Now maybe we're on the way to becoming an American colony."

Farmers' Milk Income Gains $45,000,000

New York, July 9 (AP).—The Milk Industry Foundation said today the cash income of United States farmers from milk sales in May totaled $180,000,000, an increase of $45,000,000 over May, 1940, and the largest increase of any major farm product except cotton.

Farmers received $711,000,000 for their milk in the first five months of 1941, the foundation reported, compared with $615,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1940.

Fifth Man Sentenced In Television Fraud

Knoxville, Tenn., July 9 (AP).—Federal Judge George C. Taylor today sentenced to prison the fifth man involved in a fraudulent television stock sales scheme which had been in the courts for more than two years.

Judge Taylor sentenced Sam G. Kennedy of Knoxville to a two-year term, the same sentence drawn yesterday by John G. Anderson of Bristol, Tenn.-Va., E. T. Shaw of Greeneville, Tenn., and Harold F. Stone of New York.

Cont. Motors Turns Out First Plane Engines

Detroit, July 9 (AP).—The Continental Motors Corporation began deliveries today of an order for 9,000 Wright aircraft engines intended to power the Army's medium tanks and training planes.

The company, which reconditioned and tooled up an abandoned plant here for production of the engines, expects to turn out 50 of them during July and by October reach a volume of 600 monthly.

Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Ida Blue, Gold Star Mother

Funeral services for Mrs. Ida Mae Reamer Blue, 85, widow of Charles H. Blue, will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia Avenue Northwest, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Blue, active in patroitic affairs here for many years, died Tuesday night at her residence, 914 Decatur Street Northwest, after an illness of two years.

She came to Washington from Hanover, Pa., at the age of 5, during the Civil War, and had lived here continually since that time. She was a member of Grace Darling Selbold Chapter, American Gold Star Mothers, and took a leading part also in activities of the American War Mothers.

One of her sons, Walter R. Blue, died in France during the World War. Surviving are six sons, Frank L., Edward S. William F., Ralph D., Norman R. and Lou A. Blue, and one daughter, Mrs. Gertrude V. Sheckells, all of Washington.

John A. Sweeney, D. C. Attorney, Is Dead at 72

John A. Sweeney, 72, Washington attorney, died yesterday at his home, 2949 Northhampton Street Northwest. Mr. Sweeney had been ill several days.

Born in Dublin, Md., the attorney lived in Washington since 1885. He was a graduate of Georgetown University, and a member of the District Bar Association for more than 50 years.

Mr. Sweeney leaves two daughters, Mrs. William F. Delaney, of Washington, and Mrs. F. C. Cleary, of New York City; a son, John D. Sweeney, of Niagara Falls, N. Y.; two sisters, Miss A. J. Sweeney and Miss Jane Sweeney, both of Washington, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be tomorrow at 9 a. m. at the Blessed Sacrament Church, Chevy Chase. Interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

R. A. F. Tries Out New U. S. Planes, Finds Them Best

An Airfield, Somewhere in England, July 9 (AP).—British test pilots said today after rigid tryouts at altitudes ranging up to 39,000 feet that American-made four-motored Boeing (B17C) bombers are "definitely better" that new British Stirling and Halifax planes of comparable size.

They also praised without reservation the American-made Douglas (DB7) two-motored night fighter as the "heaviest armed fighter in the world" and one of the fastest big planes ever made. It has a speed of around 350 miles an hour.

Landing fields and runways of this huge ministry of aircraft production station are thickly sprinkled with scores of American aircraft newly arrived and ready for the battle for mastery of European skies.

Cleveland Bank Elects

Cleveland, July 9.—Directors of the Cleveland Trust Co. have created the office of chairman of the board and elected I. F. Freiberger to that post. At the same time, George Gund was elected president of the bank, succeeding Harris Creech, who died May 18.

Bank Stock Block Sold for $1,198,265.

New York, July 9 (AP).—One of the largest bank stock sales here in recent months was reported today by a group of investment firms headed by Dillon, Read & Co., which sold within an hour 40,290 capital shares of the National City Bank of New York at $28.50 each, a $1,198,265 deal.

In a similar over-the-counter transaction June 27 the First Boston Corporation sold 400 shares of First National Bank of New York at $1,450 a share.

ODD BODKINS — By FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

NOPE! ALL THEY DO IS WHISPER. ONE OF 'EM ALWAYS CARRIES A BRIEF CASE.
WHAT'S IN IT??
HOW DO I KNOW? YOU WANT I SHOULD GET MY PANTS KICKED FINDIN' OUT?
DIDN'T YOU SHAKE IT WHEN YOU CARRIED THEIR BAGS UP?
HE WOULDN'T LET ME TOUCH IT! HE WAS AWFUL CAREFUL OF IT! HE STEERED IT UPSTAIRS SO'S IT WOULDN'T BUMP AGAINST ANYTHING!
WELL, WE'RE HERE AT LAST!
AND IF YOU DON'T QUIT TAPPING THAT BRIEF CASE, WE WON'T BE ANYWHERE!

JOE PALOOKA — Welcome Home! — BY HAM FISHER

THAN K'YOU, SIR. I'M CERTN'Y SORRY I COULDN'T FIGHT FER 'EM AT McDILL.
THAT'S UNDERSTOOD. ARE YOU COMPLETELY RECOVERED?
OH YES INDEED SIR. LONG AGO.
FINE. I'VE A COMMUNICATION FROM THE MORALE OFFICE AT WASHINGTON. THEY'RE GOING TO STAGE A MAMMOTH BOXING CARNIVAL AT THE YANKEE STADIUM.
THE NAVY IS CO-OPERATING. THE PROCEEDS TO GO THE UNITED SERVICES---NOW ARE YOU SURE YOU ARE PERFECTLY---
OH BOY--- I MEAN YOU BETCHA--- 'SCUSE ME SIR I MEAN--- I'LL SAY SIR!

WINNIE WINKLE — Dark Viewpoint — BY BRANNER

WE'RE GETTING OUT A NEW VERSION OF THE STEREOPTICON, MISS WINKLE! I'D LIKE YOUR OPINION OF IT!
WELL, I WOULDN'T LOOK THROUGH THESE GLASSES FOR ANY OF THE LARX BROTHERS, BUT I'LL DO IT FOR YOU!
IT'S A NICE PICTURE, BUT I DON'T SEE THAT IT'S ANY DIFFERENT FROM THE OLD-FASHIONED KIND!
NOOOO?! LET ME SEE IT!
HAW-HAW HO-HEE-HEE--
MAYBE IT'S FUNNY, BUT I DON'T SEE ANYTHING TO LAUGH AT!

THE TELEGRAPH OPERATOR IS CONVINCED THAT HI CALBUR IS AN ESCAPED LUNATIC-RIGHT IN THIS PHONE BOOTH WHERE YOU CAN PHONE YOUR MESSAGE!
WAIT TILL I GET THIS STORY OFF--THEN YOU'LL HEAR FROM ME!
NOW I'VE GOT HIM TRAPPED!
SLAM!
HEY! WHAT IS THIS? LET ME OUT OF HERE!
HE STILL THINKS HI IS CRAZY-
HE'S GOT HIM TRAPPED IN THE PHONE BOOTH-HA-HA!
NOW WE'VE GOT TO FIND A WAY TO GET BACK WITH YOUR PICTURES!

SUPERMAN — Hi, Folks! — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

HAVE YOU TAKEN INTO CONSIDERATION HOW YOU CAN GET SUPERMAN TO EXPOSE HIMSELF SO YOU'LL HAVE A CHANCE TO USE THE ELECTRO-DART GUN?
INDEED I HAVE!
GENTLEMEN, PREPARE YOURSELVES FOR A SHOCK!
THE DOOR IS OPENED TO REVEAL....
SUPERMAN!

There isn't an awful lot you can say about these radio programs which continue on and on through the years with unabated popularity, but, despite that, they must have a lot that goes without saying.

Now the oldest dramatic half-hour program on the networks is "Death Valley Days," which you hear over WJSV and the Columbia network each Thursday at 7 p. m. It has been broadcast continuously ever since 1930, has never been without a sponsor and it follows as thenight the day, following those last two statements, that its popularity has steadily increased.

Sensational and expensive new programs may come and go, but the simple and unspectacular stories told by the "Old Ranger" have a steady appeal which would seem to far outweigh such "colossal" entertainment.

Since its first broadcast in 1930, "Death Valley Days" has presented about 600 dramatized stories of the old and new west. They have ranged from fast-moving melodrama to simple comedy, but, obviously, they've been consistently entertaining.

It should interest feminine listeners to learn that all of them have been written by a woman—Ruth Cornwall Woodman.

And, maybe it's news to report that Mrs. Woodman is a native New Yorker who's reversed the usual procedure by leaving that city to make her success, instead of coming to it.

Contract Bridge

With North and South vulnerable, you, West, hold these cards:

♡ 10986
◇ 10532
♣ 8764

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠	3 ♡	Dble	Pass
4 ♠	Dble	Pass	Pass
Redble	Pass	Pass	?

What call do you make?

The Solution

Pass. Something is very strange in the bidding, but there is no need to assume it is partner's fault. His three-heart overcall was promptly doubled by South, so partner should not be counting on heart tricks to defeat four spades. There is no need to take out the redouble to five hearts.

Himes Retires From Police Boys Club Board

Joseph H. Himes, an original member of the board of governors of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, was honored at a luncheon yesterday in the Ambassador Hotel as he retired from active membership in that organization.

Morris Cafritz, chairman of the board of directors, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, joined in lauding the work of Himes.

Himes said the pressure of his business made it necessary for him to step down in favor of some person who could devote more time to the organization.

Maj. Brown presented him with a testimonial scroll from the board. Himes was made an honorary member of the board of directors, the first to receive this honor.

Probe Asked In U. S. Lease Of Apartments

Representative Downs (Democrat) of Connecticut, last night said he would ask the House Rules Committee to take immediate action on his resolution, introduced yesterday, to direct the District Committee to make an investigation of leasing by the Federal Government of the Dupont Circle Apartments.

Declaring Federal acquisition of the apartment at Connecticut Avenue and Dupont Circle, to be definitely contrary to the welfare of a substantial number of Federal workers and tenants," the resolution would call upon the District Committee to report on an investigation "forthwith."

The resolution calls for all facts relating to the lease, including the date of such transaction, terms of the lease, consideration paid therefore, type and dates of notices served upon present tenants."

If the Government takes over the building, the resolution declared, 1,000 tenants will have to move. With the present Washington housing shortage, it stated, it will be "impossible" for many tenants to find new quarters.

In taking over the apartment, the Government, it was stated, will "impede and obstruct normal" defense activities.

Downs said last night he has been informed by Federal defense housing officials that under the Defense Homes Act new housing can only be constructed for workers directly employed in defense industries. Government workers, Downs said he was told, do not come under that classification.

District Prisoner Flees Occoquan; His Second Escape

Although less than five months remained of his three-year sentence for auto theft, and six months additional for a previous escape, 20-year-old James Satterwaitt, of Washington, walked away from a work detail of the Occoquan (Va.) Workhouse yesterday.

Satterwaitt had completed a three-year term at Lorton Reformatory and on May 29 began serving an additional two to six months for escaping two years ago while attending the funeral of Col. William L. Peak, former superintendent of Lorton.

Working on a construction job at the Occoquan women's division, Satterwaitt was missed at 3:30 p. m. Bloodhounds failed to pick up his scent and late last night the reservation was surrounded by guards on the assumption that he was still on the premises. Washington police broadcast a lookout.

Satterwaitt lived here at 740 Third Street Northwest.

Thomas English, 28, one-time member of Washington's "blackface gang" of holdup bandits, who escaped from Occoquan June 11, also is still at large.

Policeman Cleared Of Charges He Struck Boy

Policeman J. P. Miller, Ninth Precinct, was acquitted by a Police Trial Board yesterday of charges that he assaulted 15-year-old Charles Covington, of 631 F Street Northeast, last April 8.

The youth accused the policeman of striking him in the mouth, a blow which broke two teeth, while he was being taken to the Ninth Precinct Station in a taxicab.

Miller denied the charge and told the board he had taken the boy into custody in front of Uline's Ice Arena, where he was making a disturbance. The boy, struggling in the automobile, struck his face against a door handle it was said.

Playgrounds Department Starts Backyard Contest

The Community Center and Playgrounds Department is sponsoring a contest open to everybody in the District of Columbia. The only qualification for contestants is that they must have a back yard.

Fourteen prizes will be given to persons having the most attractive yards for children to play in. The department's theory is that the better the yard to play in, the less chance that children will play in the street. Separate prizes will be offered for home-made yard equipment.

The contest will be open until August 1, and winners will be announced the following week.

Entrance coupon is printed below.

Mrs. Westover, Widow of Former Air Chief, Dies

Mrs. Adelaide Bainbridge Westover, widow of Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, former Air Corps chief, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital.

Services will be held at 11 a. m. Saturday at Arlington Cemetery, where Mrs. Westover will be buried beside her husband, who died three years ago. Until tomorrow noon her remains will rest at Chambers' funeral home, 1400 Chapin Street Northwest.

A native of Graystown, Ohio, Mrs. Westover had been living in Washington for the past nine years and made her home at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel. Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Kathryn W. Freudenthal, and a son, Capt. Charles B. Westover, of the Army Air Corps.

Filipinos Attend Varona Rites

American and Filipino officials yesterday joined with members of the Capital's Filipino colony in attending requiem high mass at St. Patrick's Church for Francisco Varona.

Mr. Varona, labor assistant to J. M. Elizalde, resident commissioner of the Philippines to the United States, died in New York on June 28 at the age of 44. He was en route to the islands to become a candidate for the Insular Senate.

He was eulogized as a man who had spent himself in the interest of his countrymen. His body will be shipped from New York to Manilla August 2 on the Philippines flagship Dona Aniceta.

Senate Group to Meet Today on D. C. Suffrage

A Senate subcommittee will meet at 10 a. m. today to consider the question of suffrage and national representation for the District, but last night Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, its chairman, said he doubted a decision would be reached.

Senator McCarran previously had announced that the subcommittee would meet tomorrow, but moved the meeting forward because some members informed him they would be out of town later in the week.

Rites Tomorrow For Abe Rice, D. C. Merchant

Abe Rice, 55, a native Washingtonian and prominent businessman here, died yesterday morning after a year's illness in his home, Argonne Apartments, 1629 Columbia Road Northwest.

Mr. Rice was a life-long resident of this city and until his retirement two years ago owned and operated the National Majestic Radio & Electric Co. in the Annapolis Hotel Building.

He was a member of the Samuel Gompers Masoic Lodge for over 15 years and a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation. Mr. Rice was active in charity work also.

He leaves his wife, Dora Rice, 1629 Columbia Road Northwest; one brother, Leo Rice, of Warrenton, Va.; two sisters, Miss Bertha Rice, 2629 Connecticut Avenue Northwest; Mrs. Samuel Prager, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Funeral service will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. from Danzansky's funeral home, 3501 Fourteenth Street Northwest followed by burial in the Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

Jamieson, Aviation Writer, Pilot, Dies

Jacksonville, Fla., July 9 (AP).—Leland Jamieson, 37, Eastern Air Lines pilot and magazine writer, died today in a hospital here following a long illness.

He was widely known for his aviation adventure stories in magazines. He also was the author of two novels, "Attack," and "High Frontier." Until his illness, he regularly piloted an E. A. L. flight between Miami and Jacksonville, doing his writing between runs.

USO Drive Here 'Going Over Top'

Confidence that the United Service Organizations' drive for $250,000 in Washington would go over the top was expressed last night by Edwin N. Lewis, secretary of the District of Columbia Campaign Committee, in a talk to the Anacostia Lions Club.

Four-fifths of the amount already has been raised and the remainder will be on hand by the final report meeting next Thursday, Lewis told a meeting of the club in the parish hall of the Congress Heights Esther Memorial Episcopal Church.

Jackson Given Judicial Robe At Reception

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson received a judicial robe from his employes in the Justice Department last night to keep him warm in the "cooler dignity" of the Supreme Court.

Solicitor General Francis Biddle presented the robe to the Supreme Court justice-to-be with the hope it would "carry in its folds the friendly warmth of the department to temper the cooler dignity of the great court which you are about to join."

"I am sure," replied Jackson, "that the thoughts of the loyal and friendly cooperation that I have received in the Department of Justice and of the work that we did together will survive even the chill that the solicitor general thinks will come upon one when he enters that great refrigerator."

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and their daughter, Mary, received more than 1,500 officers and employes of the Department of Justice at a reception in the Mayflower Hotel, where the presentation was made.

The committee in charge of arrangements consisted of Ugo Carusi, Edgar Ford, Leighton Cornwell, Harry Marselli, Thomas D. Quinn, A. Devitt Vanech, Nathan Franke, Marvin Smith, Walter Moore, Carl Pergler, Frank Read, Ewing Wright, Frank Walker, John R. Benny, W. R. Glavin, James V. Bennett, L. Paul Winings, Kenneth Spencer, A. O. Hearn, Harvey Donaldson, Joe Prendergast, D. M. Lyons and Jack Love.

Relief Checks Going Out Today

Relief payments to some 2,300 local residents, held up since July 1 because of slow disbursement procedures after passage of the District supply bill, will be made today, according to Acting Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning.

Payments to the aged and blind—also due July 1—must still be withheld because authorization has not been received from the Social Security Board.

Templars to Work 1907 Drill Victory

Surviving members of the Saratoga dril of 1907 of Columbia Commandery, No. 2, Knights Templar, will meet today to celebrate the thirty-fourth anniversary of the team's winning the United States championship in competitive drilling.

They will hold a dinner at 6 p. m., at the Occidental Hotel.

Junior Board to Install

New officers of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will be installed at a luncheon today at 12:30 in the Annapolis Hotel. Fred A. Smith, president of the Washington Board of Trade, will be the speaker.

Gov. O'Conor Maps Program to Cut State Oil Use

Annapolis, Md., July 9 (AP).—Asserting that a serious shortage of gasoline and fuel oils may exist in Maryland "in the near future," Gov. O'Conor tonight said a program would be evolved to reduce consumption of petroleum products by 20 per cent in the State.

O'Conor made public a letter received from Harold L. Ickes, petroleum coordinator for national defense, who declared that unless the impending fuel shortage in the Atlantic Coast States is abated, it would "cause a serious setback in our national defense efforts."

"Further announcement," Gov. O'Conor said, "will be made of practices by which the public, from a spirit of patriotism, can cooperate. Our purpose is to evolve a program which will not entail serious hardships or inconvenience to the public, but will effect reductions in order to forestall the serious shortage anticipated by Federal officials. . . ."
